VISITOR FROM ORIENT IS ROTARIAN GUEST AT CLUB'S LUNCHEON

Constantine E. Karam Tells Listeners Interesting Facts of Radio Industry in Near East Reg-

SOUTHERN PINES, NOV. 17-Rotarians of Southern Pines, meeting at the Southern Pines Country Club on the occasion of their weekly Club luncheon yesterday, found that June A. Phillips, Chairman of the Program Committee had reached out and prepared a program that was both educational and entertain-

E. Karam is chief radio operator for the Radio Orient. Yesterday Mr. Karam was guest speaker at the Club's luncheon, and as such provided his listen-Williams, Aras, Mrs. - Byfield ers with interesting information on subjects, relating not only to the radio industry in Syria, but also of the country in general.

Mr. Karam, a guest in Pinehurst of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Razook, expressed himself as enjoying his participation in the Club's meeting, and will in all probability carry back to the Rotarians in Beyrouth, Syria, where such an organization is active, an outline of Rotary activities in the Sandhills.

A quiet, neat-appearing young man, Mr. Karam has been directing radio telegraph service in English, French and Arabic at the Beyrouth station since 1922. He regretfully stated that his duties compelled him to limit his stay in this section to another week.

The meeting, at which W. J. Simons, president, presided, was attended by visiting Rotarishe ans in the Sandhills and Mr. S. er-in-law.

EACH DAWN I DIE

In Rudyard Kipling's autobiography there is a very emotional part at which, I dare say, strong men almost wept.

Kipling had become famous and rich. He had a fine home in England, his skull was sparking with a lot of ideas, and people were clamoring to buy his copy. He was sitting pretty on top of the world.

Out of his memory comes a shadow; a recollection of an earlier joy that places the luxuries he was having at what men would call the crest of his career.

He recalled the time when he was a punk, poorly-paid reporter in India. The heat, the vermin, the dirt and the petty wrangling of the Britishers colonized far from the homeland were enough to make a man blow his top. But these aggravations and many more were more than compensated for by the heavenly delight of having In far off Syria, Constantine an Indian servant shave him in bed each morning.

> Compared to this bliss, what, of what, are the trysts with Cleopatra on a barge drifting down the moon-bathed Nile, the immortalizing kiss of sweet Helen of Troy, the touch of Midas, the might of Hercules or the magic of Dr. Faustas?

> Imagine having an expert barber to bring you out of the peace of sleep into the work and worry of the wakened world! Instead of the dragging agony of lifting yourself out of bed with a mental block-and-tackle and the depression of having to look at the same old heavy-lidded face in the bathroom mirror, you begin the day through the lazy stages of gladness.

You rub your map and it is smooth. The whole world at morning then is smooth, too.

That reference by Kipling did a lot to explain why a few British could keep millions of East Indians farly well in line. Without having to dissipate their strength of will by driving themselves to the morning shave, the British colonials who were shaved in bed got up fresh and strong and with a bit of an edge over the natives.

It does take a lot of will power to get up mornings and run the blade over the same old puss. A friend of mine has introduced a saving element of novelty into the ordeal by shaving himself with an electric mower connected to a plug in his auto as he is driven to work each morning. Such relief is only temporary. The chances are that after a few months of looking at him in the morning at home his wife will suggest that he have his breakfast with Frank Buck, the wild animal man.

I know another fellow named Ken Goit who has given so much thought to shaving that he has written out 12 itemized directions for shaving. He regards these 12 steps as essential and as the minimum routine.
