MAN ABOUT TOWN

by Lou Koch

A Weird Chest

If you want to see a strange antique-ish article and feel a surge of fascination (if you do get that way over such things) take a look in Gouger and Veno's Electric Shop window . . . it's a deer-hide covered strong box which appears to be as old as the Sandhills . . . the chest is still solid, constructed of sturdy wood, with lock and key, unbelievably, still intact and in working order . . . the high note of the piece, however, is a newspaper page stuck to the inside of the cover with shellac or some such substance . . . the top of the page reads "MORNING POST," dated Jan. 24, 1835, which will make it 105 years old two weeks from today . . . under the old-fashioned name banner of the paper it reads: Charles Gordon, Editor . . . studying the ads on the page, we find it to be a Boston paper . . . the strong box was found in this vicinity yesterday by Walter Black of Pinehurst.

Barnards Arrive

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barnard finally arrived at The Carolina last night after trying all this week to get out of Washington . . . the Barnards, you may recall, are the couple of whom we spoke in this column yesterday as engaging in a ten-minute telephone conversation with Sam, the Carolina doorman, the day before, on weather conditions here and in Washington, etc . . . well, that's nothing, for Mr. Barnard, who told Sam Tuesday that they were starting out, expecting to arrive in Pinehurst in the early afternoon yesterday, telephoned six times from Washington and way stations . . . twice to Sam, telling him they were on the way and that highway conditions were terrible (they went off the road and into ditches twice, making it necessary to get a tractor to pull their car out each time) . . . they phoned Turner Fields, hunting guide, who's to take them out in quest of game during their stay, and phoned the Carolina desk also to make certain of reservations upon their arrival, which was just about 9:45 last night . . . they had a flat tire in Apex last night . . .

Sam's Son Arrives

Incidentally, we've never seen Sam as excited as he was with telephone calls last night . . . about 8:30 he got a buzz from Raleigh . . . it was his son, Leonard Lacks, who, with his wife is making his first trip here since his graduation from the Pinehurst high school a number of years ago . . . Leonard is now residing in Watertown, Mass., where he has a position with the Goodyear Rubber Co . . . he is a graduate of Duke University.

$50,000,000 STATE ROAD CONSTRUCTION URGED BY MAXWELL

Raleigh Candidate for Governor Speaks to Kiwanis Club; Wants Thorough History Course in Public Schools

A. J. Maxwell, Raleigh, in his first speech since announcing his candidacy for Governor of North Carolina, delivered to members of the Sandhills Kiwanis Club at Southern Pines Country Club yesterday, recommended that $50,000,000 be expended to continue improvement of state highways, and that a thorough course in the history of the state be taught in public schools.

Mr. Maxwell paid tribute to James Tufts, founder of Pinehurst, as a pioneer in beautifying the state by landscaping, and urged that a new highway program should include planting of trees, shrubs and flowers along principal routes of travel.

Speakers at noonday luncheons have to talk against the clock, and Mr. Maxwell, in a very few minutes provided a dramatic historical sketch of North Carolina, filled with information, prediction, and above all else, faith in the future of the old north state. It was not a political speech, but it set a high mark in North Carolina campaign oratory.

"The first Englishmen to land on the Coast of North Carolina," said Mr. Maxwell, "scouted the land and returned to England with the conviction that they had found the 'Goodliest land under the cope of Heaven.'"

Of principal interest to the Sandhills were Mr. Maxwell's remarks concerning improvement of highways, which, as he pointed out, would mean so much added travel to the resort areas of the state.

Having been for many years state commissioner of revenue, he spoke with authority when he advised that the $50,000,000 road program could be carried out without issuing bonds or increasing taxes; that the improvement (Continued on page three)

MEETING APPOINTS COMMITTEE TO MAKE PLANS FOR DOG SHOW

Dog lovers predict that the membership in the kennel club which will be formally organized within a few days will reach 150 by the time the show is held in the spring.

Last night at the Carolina Hotel a few of the most enthusiastic met, and Harry W. Norris presided at a meeting the principal business of which was the appointment of a committee to nominate officers and name a date upon which a permanent organization will be set up.

Dr. J. I. Neal was named chairman of the committee. Others appointed were Col. George P. Hawes, Emmett Boone and Samuel Allen.

Present plans call for a show on the course of the Sandhills Steeplechase in April.
