

RUSSIANS REPORT MANNERHEIM LINE CITADEL CAPTURED

Claim Occupation of Town and Fortress of Koivisto After 12 Weeks of Hammering, and Downing of 47 Planes.

800 BOMBERS IN RAIDS

By Associated Press

Russian army headquarters reported yesterday that its troops had occupied the town and fortress of Koivisto, western citadel of the Mannerheim line, and had "cleared" them of the enemy. The Koivisto fortress fell after 12 weeks of hammering from Soviet planes and artillery.

Taking of the fortress, key to the end of the Mannerheim line, was foreshadowed Monday when Russian headquarters reported the occupation of two islands off Johannes, cutting off the Koivisto region, and making it untenable.

The Russians also claim to have shot down 47 Finnish airplanes in yesterday's air battles.

More than 800 Russian bombers swept over much of Finland in a fury of air raids yesterday. Seven air raid alarms sounded in Helsinki alone. Two trains were reported bombed and machine gunned during the day.

ADDOR IS BUILDING SHRINE TO REPLACE ROOM WITH CHIMES

Addor, the Sandhills first exclusive night club proprietor, who during the twenties welcomed the merry makers of the Sandhills to his unique spot south of Pinehills, is building another shrine, behind closed doors, to replace the Christmas tree room and the chimes.

For more than a quarter century visitors to Addor's were ushered into the Christmas tree room with great ceremony, to behold one of the most unusual spectacles of the region, a Christmas tree which was always in bloom, and to hear the chimes upon which Addor, in person, played Silent Night.

No matter how gay the party at Addor's—and some of them made regional history—there was always an intermission in the dancing and dining so that a visit might be paid in most respectful mood to view the Christmas tree.

About a year ago the building which housed the tree burned. Addor spent more than 25 years perfecting this exhibit, and now, in his advanced years he has started to create another shrine. He does not know when it will be opened for public inspection. Perhaps this season, perhaps not for months.

The interior of this room is a secret, and will remain one until Addor is ready to open it.

Judge McMahon Visions Racing Boom at Track

Europe may go to the wars, but America goes to the races, according to Judge Raymond J. McMahon, Providence, attorney for the Narragansett track in Rhode Island over which Mr. O'Hara and state authorities had a "front page" row.

All is now quiet on the Narragansett front, according to Judge McMahon, who predicts that the "play" next summer will reach new highs. Hiאהah Park in Miami was 30 per cent ahead of last year, he pointed out at a small gathering of horse folks at the Dunes Club, yesterday.

Judge and Mrs. McMahon are guests of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kennedy of Dedham and Pinehurst. The Kennedys have added their excellent stable of hunters and show horses to the local equestrian activities.

Clarence Hungerford Craven of Boston, ring master at Madison Square Garden horse shows, was a member of the party, along with Clayton V. Sawyer, Boston; J. C. Thomas, Pinehurst and Mr. Warman.

PASS THE SCOTCH—WE'LL HAVE TWO DOUBLES

Last Saturday's New York Sun contains a special air mail dispatch from London to the effect that Robert Spear Hudson, England's Number One Salesman today, and son-in-law of the late P. S. P. Randolph says:

"Every time an American has a Scotch and soda he is helping American industry and helping us.

"For every dollar that is spent on Scotch whisky—and that's England's largest export to the U. S. A.—goes to buy arms or airplanes. A bottle of claret or burgundy helps the French."

If you should be resolutely opposed to supplying munitions to the allies, you can give up Scotch and concentrate on rye or bourbon, which will not help England, we suppose.

A couple of questions we have in mind are:

How would a yen for Irish whisky affect the situation and just which side would that aid?

Or Italian wine?

Suppose you drink only tea?

What's the matter with buying American? Milwaukee and Brooklyn are good beer towns.

Vodka?

California claret or burgundy?

Kentucky stump corn?

What's the matter with Canadian whisky?

HOTEL TO EXHIBIT NOTABLE PORTRAIT OF GEN. WASHINGTON

Guests of the Carolina will have special cause to remember the anniversary of the birth of Washington on Thursday for a copy of a portrait of General Washington, painted from life by a Flemish artist, in Philadelphia, is to be hung in the hotel.

The copy was made by the Pinehurst artist, H. Bingham Ballou, for S. Y. Ramage, owner of the portrait, so that if anything happened to the original, it might be preserved.

The marvelous coloring of the blue and yellow of the uniform and, in fact, the whole portrait in the opinion of competent critics gives it high rank in comparison with the work of such noted artists as Gilbert Stuart, Peale and others who so frequently painted General Washington.

Mr. Ballou has made a faithful and excellent copy which has been loaned, at the request of the hotel, for exhibition on Washington's birthday.

The name of the Flemish artist has been obliterated by the wear and tear of time. The original was purchased by the late Lieutenant Alfred Hull Ramage from an art dealer in the city of St. Louis, twenty years ago. It is now in the collection of Mr. Ramage.
