PATTY WINS FINAL
ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla.—Patty Berg, Minneapolis, won the annual women's golf tournament here today by defeating Elizabeth Hicks 3 and 2. Patty was one stroke off men's par for the 16 holes the match lasted. It was Patty's second straight win in this event.

STEEPLECHASE
tinues with these steeplechase events every Saturday far into June. Of some 21 race meetings on the card of the National Steeplechase and Hunts Association through the spring, three are held in the two Carolinas: March 16th at the Barber Estate course between Southern Pines and Pinehurst in North Carolina; March 23rd at Aiken and March 30th at Camden, South Carolina.

This will be the sixth annual meeting of the Sandhills Steeplechase and Racing Association, and during these six years a sport previously unknown except to a few horse enthusiasts in the state has developed an interest which calls people from every corner of North Carolina to the picturesque course set in the pines of the mid-South resort section. There these thousands—and it was estimated that more than 15,000 attended last year's meeting—will see the cream of hunt race, or steeplechase, horses flying over hurdles, or timber fences, or five-foot brush fences in quest of $2,900 of prize money, and silver trophies for their owners.

With the ever present danger of spills at the speed at which these horses take their jumps, there is no more exciting sport than steeplechase. During the spring season hundreds of thousands from Aiken to Rye, N. Y., to Fort Riley, Kansas, and Fort Sil, Oklahoma, gather around steeplechase courses, and it's a mingling of all classes, for the events are largely supported by subscription; if any general admission is charged at all, it is nominal. The Sandhills association charges for parking cars around the mile and a quarter track. We know of no hunt race meeting that is run for profit; none that makes money. They are "sport for sport's sake" events.

PING PONG

Koch 21-20, 21-10 for his right to move into the final bracket.

Mr. Stockton got his title as the "tuxedo kid" in the semi-final match against Wheeler. The crowd, which filled the Holly Inn ballroom to capacity, waited for about twenty minutes for Mr. Stockton to show up for his match. Ed Horne, manager of the Holly Inn and promoter of the tourney announced at 9:49 that the judges would wait eleven more minutes for Mr. Stockton to appear at the end of which time he would be subject to disqualification. Just about two minutes after the announcement was made Mr. Stockton did appear—in a tux, stiff shirt, slippers and all, and accompanied by a very pretty young lady.

The semi-finalist, a student of the University of North Carolina, found a chair for his lady, and removed his black coat.

The semi-finalist was the cynosure of all eyes. He walked to the other end of the ballroom, and after a few minutes search for his ping pong shoes, which he had left around somewhere the night before, he removed his dancing slippers and put on his "playing boots," explaining later that he "just couldn't get away from" a certain dinner party.

Mr. Horne and Mr. Cliff Sherman, a guest at the Holly Inn, served as referees and at intermission time, these two gentlemen put on a fine exhibition.

was in recognition of these that the Kenan Professorship of Dramatic Literature was conferred upon him at the University of North Carolina, one of the country's great centers of creative scholarship.

Under Dr. Koch's influence many of our most famous playwrights and novelists of the day have emerged, among them Maxwell Anderson, Paul Green, Jonathan Daniels and the late Thomas Wolfe.

MRS. SMITH WINS

Mrs. Arlene Smith, Holly Inn guest and Miss Helen Waring tied for first in the Country Club putting contest yesterday with scores of 37, one over par. The prize went to Mrs. Smith, a non-prize winner this season.
