in the running it was anyone's race, and that still held good as they dropped off one by one in the struggle against a long distance and twenty-two stout post and rail jumps.

Mansfield Park, a horse that Daly bred himself, and was hardly known to most followers of amateur racing, was responsible for most of the early excitement when he opened a long lead. They said the horse would come back but the farther he went the more he increased his lead. Then he lost Fred Powers Jr., his rider, between the sixteenth and seventeenth fences. Powers had lost one of his stirrups, and was unable to hang on. What might have happened if the rider had been able to stay aboard his mount is one of those questions that inevitably follow in the wake of a timber race.

While Mansfield Park was so far out in front things were happening behind him. Faction Fighter, with which Paul Mellon hoped to lift the cup, went down at the twelfth jump, and Catraz, which raced in Streett's colors, tumbled at the nineteenth. Then Sweet Home swung into contention after Postman Home. Mrs. James C. Clark's Home went into the lead following Mansfield Park's spill. Only three of the original six were left now, but the excitement was to continue. Home Sweet Home swung up to take the lead from Postman Home and coming into the last jump the latter moved up again to take a slight advantage. Home Sweet Home was dead tired now and went down with a smash at the last fence, leaving the field to Postman Home, and Carleton H. Palmer's Gil Blas, which finished second, defeated five lengths.

Postman Home was the second choice to the heavily backed Faction Fighter and paid off at 2 to 1. He made the trip in 7:08. Mansfield Park, like Home Sweet Home, was an outsider and it was his fast early pace that accounted for the good time for the course. Home Sweet Home was so tired when he fell that he lay on the ground, taking it easy for several minutes, and then stepped up and walked away.

Flying Over Brush

While the timber race held the place of honor on the program, the events that provided the best racing for the fashionable crowd of 10,000 were the gallops over brush. Samuel Wolf's Little Hurd was a surprise winner of the brush handicap when he moved up in the last quarter of a mile to nip Mrs. Lewis A. Park's Crooked Wood, Mrs. Esther du Pont Weir's The Dook 2nd, and F.

Ambrose Clark's La Touche, a horse that was brought over from England last year and may win good races here. La Touche dropped back to fourth after looking like a winner coming around the last turn. He will improve, and may develop into a factor in races at Belmont Park and other important steeplechase centers.

It was a disappointment for Clark to see La Touche defeated, but he and H. Grainger Gaither, his trainer, at least had the satisfaction of seeing Fay Cottage, another English jumper, win the first brush race. The Clark stable expected to win this gallop with Horner Wood, but when that fellow went down after making one turn of the field Fay Cottage moved up from the rear and took command.

Governor Clyde R. Hoey of North Carolina headed the crowd and made the presentation of the Sandhills Cup. There were many of prominence on the turf in the crowd, including Mr. and Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, Howard Maxwell, W. B. Miller, Dr. Hugh Parshall, the harness racing man; Jack Healey, Pete and Dunbar Bostwick, Billy Post and Louis Stoddard Jr. Algernon Craven, Henry D. Kirkover, S. A. W. Baltazzi and F. Wallis Armstrong were in the stewards' stand.

Freddie Slate suffered a fracture of the collar bone when he went down with Louis Stoddard Jr's Danny Byrne in the second race. It looked as though Danny Byrne fell over Horner Wood, but Slate said the horse tumbled, and then rolled over Horner Wood. The two were close together when all of this happened, but neither was the cause of the other falling.

Jack Rich, who won with Fay Cottage, had reason to feel elated. He had never won a race before. Rich had an opportunity to ride because Francis Bellhouse, contract rider for the Clark stable, had a fall while schooling last week and was not ready for action.

Pete Bostwick said that the entry for the meet at Aiken next week will be top class. There will be trotting races at Aiken as well as the events for the runners and jumpers.

Mrs. Willing Bromley's Planters' Punch, a well known fellow in hurdle races at Aqueduct, won the run of one mile on the flat that closed the sport. Richard K. Mellon's Escape 3rd, the favorite, was second.

SLUGGISH SLUGGERS OUSTED FROM RING BY IRATE OFFICIAL

Myron Barrett, match maker at the Amusement Center, jumped into the ring last night during what was scheduled to be the wind-up and "knocked out" both of the artists with some stinging verbal blows to the ears.

Mr. Barrett told the two big colored boxers that they better go back to cooking or caddying, that their exhibition was "terrible." He put on a substitute final in which Demus Jones knocked out Royaster McCall in the second round. It was a technical K. O.

Last night's effort will be Mr. Barrett's last in the Amusement Center. The seating capacity is too small to handle a large enough audience to pay for good fights, and the local talent has been found wanting. The wind-up boys, who have been taking a percentage of the gate, have taken one look at the crowd and evidently adjudged it worth one invisible punch.

There were four prelims last night.

Paul Bigelow, Hamlet, won a decision over James Arthur, Hanover, Pa. Marvin Smith, Pinehurst, won over Jack Curran, Southern Pines. Red Kennedy, Pinehurst, won over Leland Daniels, Southern Pines, and David Wright Jr., won over Chico Bland.

Wolves Club

The sixth annual banquet of the Wolves Club held last night at the Berkshire Hotel brought together a group of thirty members and guests, all enthusiastic bridge players, who honored Eberhard Faber, their president, upon his recent 81st birthday anniversary, enjoyed a splendid dinner and concluded the evening with bridge.

The feature was the reading by Donald Parson of a poem dedicated to Mr. Faber. Mr. Parson, some time ago wrote a very excellent poem dedicated to The Wolves Club, and this was printed on the menus.

The members and guests attending were George Betts, E. C. Keating, E. S. Blodgett, Captain Roberts, Dr. S. H. Blodgett, H. D. Chater, Robert Clapp, Bob Finney, Eberhard Faber, John M. Schmaltz, H. P. Corson, W. B. Holton Jr., James T. Hunter, Arthur E. Jones, Arthur E. Jones, Jr., Jack Zelle Jr., Samuel O. Miller, J. C. Musser, N. S. Hurd, F. C. Lesh, Donald Parson, F. C. Robertson, Sam Cook, F. E. Holland, Frank McCluer Jr., Thomas R. Rudel, K. B. Trousdell, C. S. Waterhouse, Dr. Myron W. Marr, Donald Sherrerd and William T. McCullough.

Mr. Parson's poem to The Wolves:

ARCTIC EXPLORER AT FORUM ON THURSDAY

The Pinehurst Forum, on Thursday evening, March 21st, will present Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, veteran Arctic explorer and sea-faring yarn-spinner, in a program entitled "North with Bob Bartlett."

For the first time in color, motion pictures of the Arctic will be shown. The eerie light of the midnight sun produces a most unusual hue, which adds greatly to the beauty of the film.

Capt. Bartlett, who has been commuting to the Arctic ever since Admiral Peary's first expedition, is a familiar and esteemed figure to many Pinehurst people.

Dr. DeWitt B. Bettleton, whose house guest "Cap'n Bob" will be, recalls with pleasure the northern voyage he once made with him aboard the "Marricette," which sailed from Boston.
