TRACK RING IS BEING PREPARED FOR HORSE SHOW NEXT TUESDAY

James Tufts, chairman of the Pinehurst Horse Show, reports that the Pinehurst Race Track riding ring is being prepared for the event which will take place Tuesday, March 26. The outside course is also being prepared, with nine jumps, including log jump, post and rail, Aiken, and barrel jump.

Boxes and parking spaces are now on sale for the show, and reservations may be had by calling the office of the secretary, telephone 2601.

A feature of the show will be a jumping exhibition by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Kennedy's famous pony, Little Squire, ridden by Mickey Walsh. Little Squire is fast becoming a necessary feature on any local equestrian program.

Mrs. Richard Tufts, chairman of the program and trophy committee, has announced that local advertisers are lending their support to the show, having subscribed to 25 spaces in the program.

Local patrons of the equestrian sports who have contributed prizes and money for the show include Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cook, Mrs. L. A. Friend, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Lesh, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Horne, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Norris, Mrs. William H. Parkinson, Miss Hilda Muller and Stanley D. Fobes, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Parson, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Pinkham, Mrs. Leroy Gates, Mr. and Mrs. Norwood Johnston, Carl Andrews, and James Warman.

BURNS HERE TO BOOK GOLF PROFESSIONALS

Joseph E. Burns, of the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland, is a guest at the Carolina during the North and South open. Mr. Burns is here making reservations in the Hollenden for the professionals who will visit that city to play in the national open championship early in June. The Hollenden has been designated as headquarters for the touring pros by Fred Corcoran, tournament manager for the P. G. A.

Richard F. March, vice-president of the Dewitt operated hotels, in which the Hollenden is included, is a golfer, and knows many of the leading professionals. Mr. March is a low handicap amateur.

More than thirty players made reservations yesterday with Mr. Burns for the Hollenden Hotel.

PINELANDS WEDDING CLIMAXES COURTSHIP

Outlook Engraving

MR. AND MRS. JIMMIE DWYER. Mrs. Dwyer, before her marriage, was Miss Audrey McNevens. Both are from New York, and are guests at The Berkshire.

By Lou Koch

A two-way story of "Sawdust Trail" and how it led to Pinehurst by way of romance road and the marriage license bureau at Carthage, our county seat, is at present the liveliest bit of lobby talk at the Berkshire Hotel.

After a two-year courtship which originated with their introduction in The Sawdust Trail, famous Broadway after-theatre night spot, Jimmie Dwyer, owner of that midnight rendezvous, and Miss Audrey McNevens, New York model, came to Pinehurst. They arrived at The Berkshire Tuesday evening, after motoring down from New York, bound for Augusta, Georgia, their proposed wedding place.

The two love birds weren't sure whether they'd fly to Bermuda, Havana, Nassau or the newly-initiated Honeymoon Isle in the Gulf of Mexico, for their honeymoon.

After an hour or so in Pinehurst, Jimmie took a secret side trip to Carthage, where he discovered that no obstacle existed preventing a Moore County, North Carolina wedding the following day. Miss Bessie McCaskill, registrar of deeds and the only person in Moore County empowered by law to do so, issued the license to Jimmie.

"That certain magic," which follows the receipt of the paper which makes two one and one two, gripped Jimmie with an electric hold. Thus, the bridegroom of the near future and his bride-to-be went into conference, compromised and picked Pinehurst and Moore County for both the ceremony and as honeymoon lane. They were married Wednesday morning by Hugh Kelly, Carthage justice of the peace, who, as Jimmie related, interrupted the ceremony to inform the couple, "I haven't even had my morning Coca Cola yet."

"Everything in Pinehurst looked so beautiful, in spite of the rain, that we knew we couldn't find a prettier spot," Dwyer said, beaming at his bride after they had returned to the Berkshire. He added, "My golf sticks are out in the car and the fairways are damp, but you can't have everything."

Upon their return to The Berkshire after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Blodgett, after getting a tip about the marriage, sent out for an extra large bag of rice and met them at the door with a group of other hotel guests. Someone banged out the wedding march on the Berkshire piano. Emerson Humphries, Pinehurst photographer, appeared on the scene and took several flash bulb shots as glasses were raised in a toast to the newlyweds.

Jimmy is quite the piano player himself, having been a star of the Keith Vaudeville Circuit for ten years. He played "Let Me Call You Sweetheart." This was the song on the stand before him as he sat down to play.

HOGAN LAUDS DRIVER

win a tournament or two or maybe three.

"Driving has always been my trouble because there were times when the battle got hot that a tailend hook would lead me into misery," said the man whose 66 of yesterday was the finest golf round he had ever played. "There's something about that driver which fits me like a glove. Its weight is so nicely concealed it doesn't seem as heavy as it really is. I tell you I never drove better."

His drive at the eighteenth typified what he meant. Knowing a par four would give him the precious 66 he gave the ball everything he had without regard for consequences. It flew straight and true over all the bunkers which guarded the right side and pulled up fifteen yards ahead of Craig Wood whose reputation as a hitter is not slight, and all of twenty-five yards beyond where Harry Cooper's ball came to rest.

It was not the first time that Hogan had initiated his bid for a tournament with a 66. He had done something similar at San Antonio in the Texas open but on a course much inferior to Pinehurst's celebrated championship layout. He seemed to have that title won beyond peradventure until Nelson caught him with two birdies on the last two holes and then clipped him in the subsequent playoff.

It is mighty doubtful that something of the like is to happen in this North and South. It doesn't seem possible that the fates could be that cruel to a man who perseveres as valiantly as he does. Hogan has been ripe to break through for a long time and Jane Opportunity is not likely to snub him again.

However the pace is inordinately swift. When the second eighteen hole journey was launched this morning sixteen challengers were within five strokes of him. Three strokes back was Paul Runyan, whose 69 was a mixture of good and bad but mostly good. "Little Poison" hit two big iron shots in the neck but still was able to escape damage. A stroke behind him were four clustered at 70. These included Jack Patroni, professor, of Manchester, Vt.; Johnny Revolta, who putted like a fiend and Ted Luther of Pittsburgh. There were no fewer than eleven posted at 71, one under the prescription.
