MOTHERHOOD

The greatest ambition of American men and women is to have homes blessed with children. The woman afflicted with female disease is constantly menaced with becoming a childless wife. No medicine can restore dead organs, but Wine of Cardui does regulate derangements that prevent conception; does prevent miscarriage; does restore weak functions and shattered nerves and does bring babies to homes barren and desolate for years. Wine of Cardui gives women the health and strength to bear healthy children. You can get a dollar bottle of Wine of Cardui from your dealer.

WINE OF CARDUI

March 1st, 1901. Memphis, Tenn. April 14, 1901. In February, 1901, I took one bottle of Wine of Cardui. I had been married fifteen years and had never given birth to a child. I took Wine of Cardui. Now I am mother of a fine baby girl which was born March 1st. The baby weighs fourteen pounds and I feel as well as any person could feel. Now my home is a happy one. I will be without Wine of Cardui in my house again.

CHAPTER XI.
STEALING THE GUNS.

JAQUELINE once more became an object of undivided interest. The men crowded about her, starting at her, making exclamations of admiration, vying to find a way to do her honor. Presently they cut saplings, out of which they constructed a rude chair, decorating it with twigs, and one ill favored bandit, to whom nature had imparted a spark of art, gathered wild flowers with which to put on finishing touches. When the seat was completed, the men looked awkwardly at Jack, and the captain, presenting the tips of his fingers, led her to her improvised throne.

who at the first sign that I was to be torn apart had recovered her equanimity and had intruded some of her restored courage into Jack, saw at once the advantage of keeping up her cousin's popularity. Seizing some of the flowers, she wove them on a framework of green twigs into a circular garland and insisted on crowning the favorite, not queen of May, for May had not yet come, but queen of a month far more appropriate—April.

away, but he paid no attention to it. Something came sliding along the ground and lodged against me. The guard heard it, started, cast a quick glance at me, then about him, but seeing nothing, relaxed into his former quietude. I felt for what had struck me and clasped a jackknife. Meanwhile Buck disappeared, but soon appearing again in his place, held up a carbine. He had doubtless stolen it from one of the men who slept on the edge of the circle about the fire. Again he disappeared, and I watched eagerly for his return. The guard was still awake, though nodding, but had he been more watchful he would not likely have discovered Buck, for the underbrush, both where the boy appeared to me and where it skirted the sleeping guerrillas, was so thick that in passing around the camp he was comparatively safe from observation. Besides for most of the distance Buck traversed in his gun foray the guard's back was toward him.

The guard opened his eyes and looked at the intruder.

AT CHIMNEY ROCK.

Looking Up Through Nature to Nature's God at this Beautiful Spot.

Chimney Rock, July 31—Dark indeed, must be that spirit, which when contemplating the great handiwork of God, does not feel an aspiration towards a better, higher life, a longing to know the mysteries of the great beyond.

As I gaze upon these great mountains, my soul looks toward the hills of Zion, and is full of thankfulness for this beautiful world, and for that world to which we are hastening by every heart-throb; a world far more beautiful than we can imagine, for "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man, the things which He hath prepared."

Chimney Rock Mountain, which is in front of Mountain View Inn, with the Rocky Broad river at its base, rises to an altitude of 2,000 feet. The chimney which is on the left side of the mountain, is 160 and the falls on the right is 1,100 feet high. Bald Mountain is at the rear of Mountain View Hotel, and north of Chimney Rock.

The road lies in a valley all the length of the mountains and is hemmed in on either side by them, while the river is on one side to about three miles beyond Bat Cave, where it turns north, and the road continues along Bear Wallow creek for several miles.

The valley broadens near the top of the Blue Ridge and both creek and river are lost from view. Reedy creek empties into the river at Bat Cave. A mile from Bat Cave, on Reedy Patch road, is Edney's Inn, which is three miles and a half from Mountain View Inn. Esmeralda Inn is a mile west, and the Logan House is a mile east of Mountain View. All these are pleasant places for the summer tourist to visit, and if you bring with you a joyous spirit you will be happy here. There are houses dotted along the road, a very short distance from each other, resembling one long street. If you want solitude you can find it along the banks of the river, in some shady nook or under the shadow of some great rock. Often as I wander along, charmed with the beauty, solitude and grandeur of all around me, I chance upon some running brook which reminds me of the presence of children, having nothing to do but all the while to laugh and play. Sometimes I wonder at the beautiful forest and plants and trees of smaller growth, since there are so many, many rocks I am sitting as I write on one quite as large as fifty others as large. The trees above me and all around are thickly covered with foliage, permitting only here and there a ray of sunshine to penetrate their denseness. The river at my feet, goes roaring and bounding on, over myriads of rocks carrying on her foaming crest anything that may come in her way.

The mountains rising so high, piercing as it were, the heavens; so peaceful and still; the cool air, the soothing sounds of the river, all produce a sound to quiet tired nerves, and bring peace to aching hearts.

While writing on this subject, I do not forget the historic, Sherrill House. It was here that General W. I. Palmer, now of Colorado Springs, camped with his army of 2,200 men in April, 1865. He again visited his old camping ground the 6th of last May, accompanied by his two daughters, Dorothy and Marjory.

The old piazza is made memorable by the names of thousands inscribed upon her walls. Regardless of the old adage, "Fools names are like their faces, often seen in public places," we added our name to the long list.

I had the privilege of looking over a register which is fifty years old. Most of the travel in those days was from South Carolina, eastern North Carolina and Georgia. As I stand on the piazza looking north, I see Black Knob and Cedar Cliffs, all of the beautiful Swannanoa range. Casting my eyes lower, if indeed the range of vision can discriminate numerically, the undulations of mountains and valley, I see the grand old Blue Ridge running almost directly north and south, then lost behind the Swannanoa range, going northward.

Suddenly the lightning flashes zigzag across the whole scene. Presently the thunder rolls and reverberates, then dies along the mountain sides. I see the rain along the valley of Cedar Cliffs, but it does not come near us.

The Sherrill House is half a mile from the top of Blue Ridge. From this lofty height as I gaze upon those western hills, upon valleys flecked with farms and farm houses, I was fascinated, spell-bound, by the great panorama of pyramids and altars, their incense ascending continually to heaven.

For picturesqueness and grandeur no place among the mountains of western North Carolina surpasses the scenery of Chimney Rock.

As I look upon the rocky cliffs, standing out from the sky yet reaching to it, I can but wonder what is beyond or above.

A storm at any time is grand, like that on the ocean, the great elements of nature fighting a superior antagonist, is the grandest spectacle of nature. Then I feel more than ever the greatness of God, the weakness of human nature, the sublimity of His nature. Words cannot describe such a phenomenon; the mind can only absorb it but cannot speak of it.

—Mrs. L. Kendrick Conley in Charlotte Observer.

The Alphabet on a Pinhead.

H. A. Houseal, an engraver, has accomplished a task in the engraving of the Lord's prayer upon a silver dollar, which was supposed for a long time to be the triumph of fine work in engraving. He has managed to engrave the alphabet complete on the head of a common pin. Mr. Houseal, who rarely uses a glass in his work, can read the letters with the naked eye, and although there are few persons whose eyesight is so strong, a common magnifying glass serves to make them easily distinguishable. The letters range from left to right, and are all capitals.

In the first circle around the edge of the head of the pin are the letters from A to M, inclusive. Within this is the second circle beginning at N, and ending in Z, and directly in the centre is the &c. mark. The diameter of the pinhead is barely a sixteenth of an inch and it can be understood how small the letters must be. They are about one-fourth the size of the letters in the Lord's Prayer engraved on a dollar. The work occupied about an hour and a half, and was done during an afternoon about a month ago. Mr. Houseal occasionally leaving it to attend to customers in the store. It was done with an ordinary engraver's tool.—Baltimore American.

Beat His Own Record.

That was a marvelous performance yesterday of the great horse Crescens. He clipped a quarter of a second off his own record—that too in the face of an adverse wind—and went a half mile in a quarter of a second less than 60, which was never done before in the history of the turf. There is no guessing what we may yet see as the breed of horses is improved. There are those of us who can remember when 2:40 was considered extraordinarily fast time. Now it is 2:02.—Charlotte Observer, 3rd.

Through the months of June and July our baby was teething and took a running off of the bowels and sickness of the stomach," says O. P. M. Holliday, of Deming, Ind. "His bowels would move from five to eight times a day. I had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house and gave him four drops in a teaspoonful of water and he got better at once." Sold by Twitty & Thompson.

WILL WE BE SCARCE UP THERE?

A Chicago Preacher's Idea That Women Will Predominate in Heaven Won't Do.

If the Rev. Mr. Leach, of Chicago, is laying the flattering unction to his soul that he is making himself solid with the women folk by assuring his flock that the men will be scarce in heaven, he is blundering egregiously. The woman's idea of heaven is not a place from which men are excluded. It would not be more irreverent than the flippant talk of Brother Leach if we were to say that no good woman could be happy in this life or die rejoicing if she believed with him that most of her male relations and friends were bound to eternal woe. Confronted with the choice of an eternal home with her father, husband, brothers, and other dear ones of the masculine order, or eternal residence separated from them and surrounded chiefly by women, many a good and true woman would accept the former.

It is the opinion of Rev. Leach that women are living purer lives than men, and that, therefore, the hosts of heaven will be recruited from the feminine and the hosts of hades from the masculine contingent of the human race. Doubtless the average of morality is higher on the female than on the male side, and so with the average of piety and zeal in religious work. Rev. Leach and all other preachers know that women are always their coadjutors. But the preachers are apt to overlook the fact that the fathers, husbands and brothers at work out in the world are beset with many temptations from which their wives, mothers and sisters are shielded. And while the women fill the contribution boxes and help in all active charities, the men folk, the sinners whom brother Leach consigns to endless punishment, are earning most of the money which goes for the support of the gospel. It is mainly through the toil of masculine brain and sinew that funds are provided for the erection of churches, the payment of pastors' salaries, the support of missions, and all the great and good works which the churches are carrying on.

The women understand this much better than Brother Leach does. They don't believe that he will be half as lonesome in heaven for lack of the society of man as he says he expects to be. They may be willing that he should promenade the avenues of the of the New Jerusalem as Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B., trod the quarter deck of H. M. S. Pinafore, surrounded by his sisters and his aunts, but they expect St. Peter to admit them to the society of their male relatives and hosts of good men—the poor fellows whom Rev. Leach so glibly consigns to another place.—Washington Post.

Cervera Vs. Maclay.

Admiral Cervera, of Spain, is quoted as follows: "I don't know Admiral Sampson and I have no comment to make upon him. Yourships went straight to work, probably without much commanding. Admiral Schley accomplished fully the work allotted to him, and therefore, it does not seem to me that there is any room for adverse criticism—at least from the American side."

The Norfolk Virginia-Pilot suggests that Cervera ought to know as much about it as Mr. Edgar Stanton Maclay.—Charlotte Observer.
