One of the Kind That Gets Little Recognition Here Below. Did you ever know a hero real well? I know at least one and quite infinately. Who? I am afraid you would hardly recognize his name, and besides it would not be just right to give it here. He is only an old bachelor who works in a shop. He has been at one benchfor something like-well, from this you may judge: When he began, he was fresh from school. He lives in a little frame house, with an absurd little book yard hardly more than big enough for the syringa bush and the ash bar-

"The first morning I started for the shop," he ence told me, "I cut across the back yard and climbed the fence. I have been doing it ever since, and it has been a long time." In the tiny lawn is worn a deep footpath. The top rail of the back fence is smoothly polished. His feet wore the path. His bands polished the rail. And all these years he has worked at the same bench, doing the same work. Not that he lacks intelligence or that he never had an ambition. Intelligence he most certainly has, no mean lore of books and a wide, generous grasp of affairs and the drift of things. Ambition he had, too, but that was before his fect had worn a path across the back yard. I am quite sure that he once loved. In fact, I suspect that I questions, he blushes; subject him to know the one he loved, and that she some humiliation or let some ludicrous, leved thu. But he never married.
