THE LEAKE FAMILY

(From Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch)
Feb. 14, 1904.

We are happy to present this week one of the most gifted and prominent of the many illustrious Virginia families who can trace their lineage in an unbroken line from its first creation as the House of Scarsdale, 1641, and later as the House of Warwick, England, 1759.

The name was originally Leche or Leke, as found in the writs of Parliament and Hundred Rolls of the fourteenth century—some say derived from their occupation of leeching, of blood letting, which was then universally practiced by physicians.

Sir Francis Brooke, eighth baron, with title of Earl of Warwick, becoming extinct by the death of Sir Edward Rich, Earl of Warwick and Holland, September 7, 1759, was revived by Nicholas Leake, son of Sir Francis Leake, Earl of Scarsdale, who married Lady Francis Rich, daughter of Sir Edward Rich, thereby transferring to him the arms of the House of Warwick, and dropping those of the House of Scarsdale.

Sir Francis Leake was son (or grand son) of Sir John Leake, who was born 1656, and died 1720, son of Richard Leake, of the navy, born 1629; died 1686. Sir John Leake was master gunner of England, and it is said was the bravest man that ever served in the British navy. He became admiral, and distinguished himself particularly by his relief and preservation of Gibraltar from the Spaniards and French in 1705. He also took Carthage and Minorca, and greatly signalized himself in the Mediterranean.

He had a son, John Leake, who was an eminent physician, and founder of a hospital at Westminster for women. He also wrote many valuable books of female diseases. He died 1792. Stephen Martin Leake was of the same family; a nephew of above, he was a writer of heraldry and coins; born 1702; died 1773.

William Leake, the emigrant to Virginia from Nottingham, England, about 1685, is said to have been a first cousin of the Admiral Sir John Leake. He married Mary Bostick and settled in what is now Goochland county, but then a part of Henrico. They had issue, Walter Leake and others.

Walter Leake was born about 1704; he married Judith Mask, and raised quite a large family; lived and died at the old homestead in Goochland; he was a vestryman in King William Parish and highly influential in the county. We give the names of his children as in his will:

1. Rev. Samuel (3) Leake. He was a Presbyterian minister and a graduate of Princeton (see Foote's History.) He died, 1776, in Albemarle County, and left his widow with three daughters.

2. John (3) Leake. This is probably the John M. Leake of old Amherst county, who served in the Revolutionary War.

3. William (3) Leake. Married Judith Moseley and lived in Buckingham County. He then moved to North Carolina and had one son, Walter Leake (he dropped the final e in his name,) who married Hannah Pickett and is the progenitor of the Anson and Richmond county Leakes in that State, who have become so prominent. Some years ago there was Hon. Walter Francis Leake, who was a candidate for Governor of the State, being put up as the regular nominee of the Democratic party. He no doubt was one of this branch.

4. Mask (3) Leake. Who was married on November 22, 1758, by the Rev. William Douglas, of Louisa county, to Patience Morris, of Hanover county. His father gave him land in Albemarle, and he moved to that county and became a man of great influence in his day. He was an officer in the Revolutionary army, and was at Yorktown, with two of his sons, William and Walter. He died in 1813.

He had four sons—William (4), Walter (4), Austin (4) and Samuel (4). William (4) married and was a captain in the Albemarle militia. Walter (4) Leake, born 1762, married Elizabeth Wingfield. He was a fine lawyer, a member of the Virginia Legislature, 1805, and soon after was appointed by Mr. Jefferson judge of the Mississippi territory. He then moved with his family to Hinds County, Miss., and upon admission of that State into the Union in 1817 was elected its first senator to Congress, which he resigned to accept the nomination of Governor of Mississippi. He died in 1825, while serving his second term as Governor of the State. Leake county, Miss., is named in his honor. The following anecdote, which appeared a good many years ago in the old Richmond Enquirer, is interesting and well worth recording:

"Walter Leake was Governor of Mississippi when Lafayette was in that State in 1824. He was then confined to his bed by a disease of which he died a year or two after; but sent his aide de camp to pay his respects to the illustrious French-American. As soon as his name was mentioned, Lafayette repeated it: 'Walter Leake! I think I remember him. Is he not from Virginia?' He was told that he was. 'Well,' said Lafayette, 'he was a deserter during the Revolutionary War.' He then related an incident which he believed to be authenticated. When Captain Mark Leake was about leaving home in 1781 to lead his company into war

Walter (then seventeen years old) insisted on going with him, but the old man told him that he had given up his first born to the cause of his country, and was to dedicate himself to the same cause; and that he [Walter] must stay at home to aid in taking care of his mother and the little ones. He accordingly left him. In two days after, the old lady (a true Revolutionary matron, by the way) fitted up Walter and told him to go and fight for his country, that she would take care of the farm and little folks herself. The boy accordingly went, and participated in the siege of Yorktown. On reaching that point, his father carried him to Lafayette, and stating the circumstances, begging some easy berth for his runaway son, which was granted. 'And so,' said Lafayette, 'Walter Leake deserted home to fight for his country!'

A grandson of Governor Leake's, Col. Walter Leake Keim, Speaker of the Mississippi House of Representatives, has just recently died in that State.

Austin (4) Leake was a lawyer of promise, but in early manhood while arguing a case in the Supreme Court of Appeals in Richmond, suddenly sank down and died soon after.

Samuel (4) Leake was a physician in Albemarle county; he married Sophia Farrar, and had three sons, Samuel (5), William J. (5) and Shelton F. (5).

There were besides the four sons of Walter Leake (2), four daughters—Elizabeth, who married James Coleman; Judith, who married John Christian; Mary, who married Christian, and Christianna (or Kitty), who married William Johnson.

Shelton F. (5) Leake, third son of Samuel (4) Leake, was a most
