DEATHS

started to his Blewett Falls farm, but before getting there he was seized with a pain in his chest and heart. Dr. Webb happened by, and gave him assistance. He soon returned home and went to bed, though not feeling particularly ill. About 9:30 that night he dropped off to sleep, and the family prepared to retire with no apprehension of impending death. He happened to sleep soundly, snoring quite audibly; however, around 1:40 Mrs. Watson noticed the breathing had become quieter, but irregular, and called Mr. Chalk, her son-in-law, from upstairs. It was quickly seen that he was in extremis, and he died within a few moments, before a doctor could arrive.

The funeral was held from the residence at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, conducted by Rev. E. H. Davis, of Franklinton, his former pastor, and Dr. C. M. Hawkins, the present pastor of the Rockingham Methodist church. A select choir sweetly sang the hymns he loved. The flowers were unusually beautiful and profuse, especially the huge ball of Easter lilies, Calla lilies, Snapdragons and white roses. Interment was in Eastside cemetery, the pall-bearers being W. B. Cole, D. L. Wicker, Dr. T. B. Hunter, P. G. Webb, Locke Everett, Hassie Cole, Judson Bristow, Geo. P. Entwistle.

Henry C. Watson was born Dec. 4, 1854, near Ledbetter's mill, a son of the late John and Mary Smith Watson.

In early manhood he came to Rockingham, and for some years clerked for the late W. C. Thomas. Later he branched into business for himself, under the name of J. C. & H. C. Watson, merchants. This later changed into the H. C. Watson, and still later (Aug. 1, 1911) as Watson-King Co., of which he was President. He operated extensive farming interests, planting 1200 acres in cotton this year, and was a director in Hannah Pickett and Entwistle mills, and in the Richmond Ins. & Realty Co. He three years ago made a big addition to what is known as the two-story Watson building, corner Lee and Washington streets, and was interested in other realty and business activities.

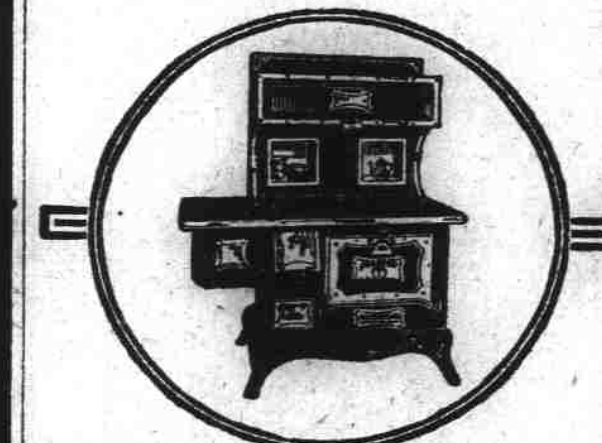

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Jennie Ellerbe, and two daughters—Mrs. J. D. Chalk, of Rockingham, and Mrs. W. Sinclair Stewart, of Charlotte. A brother, A. M. Watson, survives in Thomasville, Georgia, but was paralyzed some time ago and of course could not come for the funeral. Many friends and relatives from other towns came—from Bennettsville, Monroe and elsewhere, to show their regard for the deceased.

JOHN LEAK, Col.

John Leak, colored, died at Lumberton Monday morning. The remains were brought to Rockingham Tuesday, and the funeral held from A. M. E. Zion church Tuesday afternoon. John was a brother of Dewey Leak here, and plied his trade as expert barber for many years. He had lived in Lumberton for the past 20 years. Diabetes was the immediate cause of death.

CAROLINE COVINGTON, Col.

Caroline, wife of the late Noah Covington, colored, died May 7th, and was buried Sunday at Holly Grove.
