

CONSERVATION FARM NEWS

Weekly Items Interesting to Farmers in the County. by W. H. Abrams and D. E. Campbell

J. E. Ussery, conservation farmer of the Wolf Pit section, had his land terraced a few years ago. He has maintained his terraces and farmed on the contour since he had the terraces built. He says that what he puts on his land stays and does not wash off.

Oscar H. McRae, conservation farmer of the Green Lake community, has a strip of sericea on a steep hill side. He uses this to furnish hay and at the same time helps control erosion on this field.

Clyde Roberson, whose farm is located near Rockingham, is now making a plan with the Brown Creek Soil Conservation District. As a part of this plan he will construct a fish pond and put in a wild life border in the near future. The district will assist him in carrying out these practices.

Jack Cotton, conservation farmer of the X-Way section, has sown six acres of sericea lespedeza on an old steep washed away cotton field. He says that he will use this for grazing and at the same time keep this steep hill side from washing away.

"Kitty" at Hamlet

On June 20th and 21st.

"KITTY", opening at the Hamlet Theatre June 20-21, deals with an incident in the life of Sir Thomas Gainsborough, Britain's famous painter.

The director of "KITTY" is Mitchell Leisen, who happens to be a stickler for detail. So much so in fact that the research completed by Leisen's staff as background material for the picture, is a more complete encyclopedia of London in the 1780's than can be boasted by most libraries.

The information deals with all sorts of subjects, from foods to card games. But more research was necessary for this particular film than is ordinarily required, because of Gainsborough's reputation as an artist. Since so many of the scenes were filmed in his studio, Leisen's staff checked American museums containing his paintings so that they could copy his portraits. As a result, Leisen has the best collection of Gainsborough reproductions in the country.

LEISEN INCIDENTALLY, is something of a connoisseur of 18th century art. He owns a beautiful hand-rubbed pine panelled living room, imported from a castle built by the Earl of Scarsdale at Sutton-Scarsdale, Derby.

The panelling was bought by a collector, who had it cut into sections and numbered, crated and shipped to the United States. He later sold it at auction, and Mitchell Leisen bought it.

The director-owner rented the panelling to Paramount for use in "Kitty" at exactly what it would have cost to build a set almost like it; but he stayed around to see that the grips and electricians were careful about handling it.

Scarsdale Castle, in Derby, from which the panelling was taken, is no more; it was hit by a German bomb early in the war.

PAULETTE GODDARD plays the part of the disheveled street waif, Kitty, whom Sir Thomas Gainsborough engaged to pose for his portrait, "Anonymous Lady."

Kitty remained in London, when her portrait created a stir, and enjoyed an exciting life, which in those days, bordered on scandal and romantic adventure.

Ray Milland is co-star in the new picture, which has received much favorable comment wherever it has been shown.

A MILLION DOLLARS WORTH

Better make it $35,000,000 worth, if you want to take the whole order at one time.

Steel, crossties, tablecloths, coal, lumber, chinaware, fuel oil...and thousands of other items from paper clips to locomotives went into that order for the equipment, materials and supplies purchased by the Seaboard last year.

And, as in every other year, a large portion of that $35,000,000 was spent right along our lines. Those purchases helped to maintain employment and keep the wheels of industry and commerce humming in the Southeast. They also represent concrete evidence of the Seaboard's constant desire to make every contribution within its power to the advancement of the territory we serve...

For Seaboard is that kind of a railroad.
