Rockingham, N. C., Thursday, March 12, 1855.

Col. McClure, of the Philadelphia Times, describing the grand display in Washington on inauguration day, said: "It was a most imposing and impressive lesson of the sovereignty of the American people and the law-loving sentiment that accepts a radical political revolution with every attribute of patriotic obedience to the government."

RIDDLEBERGER of Virginia, McPherson's pal in the Senate, objected to the confirmation of Bayard's appointment to the Cabinet, on the ground that the distinguished appointee was not enough in sympathy with American ideas as shown by his resolution offered in the Senate in condemnation of the dynamic conspiracy in England.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

The country may well point with pride to the man and his demeanor, and the incomparable speech to the people which signaled his entrance upon the high duties of the Presidency. He said all that was necessary to say and said it in elate, courtly, and striking language.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The stock law for this county, having passed the Senate, failed to come up in the House for final action. Under a joint resolution to call up bills serially this bill could not be reached before adjournment.

THE CABINET.

Thomas Francis Bayard, born in Wilmington, Delaware, Oct. 29th, 1828, is Secretary of State. Daniel Manning, born in Albany, N. Y., August 16th, 1831, Secretary of the Treasury.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Correspondence of the Rocket.

Never did the sun shine more benignly on human pomp and pageantry than on the fourth of March, 1855, when Cleveland was inaugurated President of the United States.

The inauguration ceremony passed off smoothly. Mr. Cleveland delivered his address in a clear, strong voice, and without other gesture than a slight motion with his right hand.

I had never seen the President until he appeared in the carriage on his way to the Capitol. I was impressed by his pallor, his expression of weariness, and his hair, which looked older than his photographs.

The city is overflowing with visitors, and so great is their enthusiasm and good will that it is feared that they will bore the President to death. His time on the day after inauguration was occupied in shaking hands with delegations, which had no other excuse or object than a desire to meet and greet the President of the United States.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

FELLOW-CITIZENS:—In the presence of this vast assemblage of my countrymen I am about to supplement and seal by the oath which I shall take the manifestation of the duty and responsibility of a citizen.

But the best results in the operation of a government, wherein every citizen has a share, largely depend upon a proper limitation of purely partisan zeal and effort, and a correct appreciation of the time when the best of the national should be merged in the patriotism of the citizen.

To-day the Executive branch of the government is transferred to new keepers. But this is still the government of all the people, and it should be none the less an object of their affectionate solicitude. At this hour the animosities of political strife, the bitterness of partisan defeat and the exultation of partisan triumph are all to be put away.

Regular Correspondence of the Rocket.

By the Father of his Country our Constitution was commended for adoption as "the result of a spirit of amity and mutual concession."

But he who takes the oath to-day to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States only assumes the obligations of a citizen, not of a partisan.

I was afflicted for nearly four years with eczema. The doctors called it that. I was cured by Dr. J. C. Stewart's Sweet Snuff.

My daughter, seven years old, has been afflicted with eczema for two years, and after trying other remedies in vain, I gave her Dr. J. C. Stewart's Sweet Snuff.

THE BATTLE OF BULL RUN.

Written by the Confederate General, G. T. Beauregard, this is a most interesting and valuable contribution to the history of the war.
