CORSETS ARE CURSES.

SOMETHING CONCERNING HOW AND WHEN THEY ORIGINATED.

Ovid Puts Them at the Head of Remedies Against Love-Oils and Unguents in Developing the Human Form Divine-A Few Foints Also About Foot Gear.

The small accessories of toilets, whether they be necessities or only pretty adjuncts, have made industries which have employed many people in their manu-facture, and have added largely to the growth of that passion for dress which has, in different centuries, broken out in both man and woman. Adoration for the human form has covered the feet, bedecked the hands with jeweled trifles, and incased the body feminine in stiff whalebones until it has become of different shape than nature intended. No article of apparel is so much discussed at this time as the corset; in truth, there is an absolute war over it.

TO MAKE THEM GRACEFUL.

Still, this same corset has held sway long and firmly. Even in the days when the Greek sculptors builded their ideal of beauty on the Venus de Milo writers inweighed against large waists, Qvid put-ting them at the head of remedies against love. They were an undoubted out- by Dr W M Fowlkes & Co. growth from the bandages worn by the Greeks to restrain a tendency to corpulency, and were as much used by men as by women, if we are to believe Aristophanes. History also relates that Marc Antony had need to resort to such means "to compress his swelling figure." The bands were three in number-the strophium, a bandage wound round the bust; a zona, or the waist belt, and the tenta, wound round and round below the waist. Nor were the bandages worn alone for compressing undue rotundity of form. They were made wider and longer and wrapped in large folds about slight figures to give them the grace of undulating lines. From the latter use, more than the former, has descended the reprehensible habit of lacing, the cause of the outcry against the stiff, whaleboned corset of today.

In the ancient days a very thin, slender figure attained to a much admired position by being enfolded in a large and using only one thickness of bandage as the zona, producing the first effect of an unnaturally small waist. When this did not prove effectual in disguising the lack of cushioning to their bones they resorted

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to the taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind colic, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Since the days of incense burning in the temples, a record of which is found in the books of Moses, have perfumes been used, and from the Egyptians, through the Jewish people, has passed the art of making them, of burning aromatics and of carrying about richly wrought flacons of scent which have sometimes been made in the form of smelling bottles and again as perfume sprinklers. The fashionable woman of today wears her antique silver vinaigrette suspended from her chatelaine or carries her scent about in a costly flacon, rich with chasings or carvings, filigree work or enamel of fragile Venetian glass, or of metal thickly studded with jewels, and none of a greater size than can be readily carried in the hand, which fashion Queen Elizabeth instituted in carrying about her pomander. By the way, it was in her reign that perfumes and scents began to be manufactured generally by Europeans, although as early as the Fourteenth century the Venetians competed with the dwellers in the far east in the manufacture of sweet odors.

Ingenuity today is not taxed to furnish fresh designs for scent bottles, as the gold and silversmiths have only to copy the relics of other days preserved in families and museums, the demand being only for antiques, and the supply is largely of imitations. Some beautiful patterns are devised in the form of the most grotesque of goblins and dragons, wrought out in gold and precious stones. Others are chased with scrolls and surmounted with coronets and coats of arms, suggesting German workmanship; others are carved of wood or some one of the semi-precious stones, as the onyx, the bloodstone, the carnelian and the like. These usually have a base or cup of gold or silver filigree work, and are usually of French manufacture, although the carvings may be brought from India, Switzerland and Italy: yet another is of silver inlaid with arabesques of gold, and is evidently Moorish.

Who would suppose that the common use of shoes and all kinds of foot coverings was of a much later date than the carrying of scent bottles? No one, I am sure; and yet the people of certain Eupean countries, long after they had learned to clothe their bodies in an elaborate and costly fashion, were in the habit of "going barefooted." This was the custom even so late as the Sixteenth century, and in the Fourteenth warriors equipped in full armor rode about without any covering on either feet or legs DRY GOODS, below the knees.
