As we get deeper into farming, we feel that our experience should be given to the world.

Chased the Cash Ball.

Binghamton Herald.

Some amusement was created in a dry goods store in this city the other day when a farmer came in to make a purchase. He bought some calico and when the clerk placed the bill the farmer gave him in the cash ball and sent it spinning toward the cashier's desk, a funny sight was

Our rural friend evidently thought that was the last he would see of his bill unless he moved lively, which he did, keeping his eves fixed on the ball. He collided with an old lady, fell over one of the seats regained his feet and kept right on until he arrived at the cashier's desk.

"By gosh! I want my money, he gasped. "I've read too much about bunco steerers to lose my meney, and I'll have my change if ! clean out the whole sheebang.

He was finally pacified, and departed amid the broad smiles of the clerks and customers in the store. As he went out he muttered:

"If I don't come to the city very often, them swindlers can't catch me with their sawdust games."

Salisbury Herald: The Herald learns that since the death of Octavia Beaver no one will take her looms at the cotton factory. A Mr. Bailey first worked at the looms and died very suddenly, and was succeeded by Miss Beaver, who died in like manner. These two deaths have created the impression that the looms are diseased, and no one will have anything to do with them .-Of course there is absoluely no foundation for any such action or belief as this. It is impossible that a loom can be made a medium for conveying sickness, and it is the sheerest folly to put credence in it. Such superstition might have been tolerated in the days of darkness and witchcraft but it is entirely out place in this century.

From Capel's Mills.

Correspondence.

On last Friday and this section, though not enough to do any damage. This is about the mouth later than last year. Mr. C. Cole, handed me his brag stalk of cotton from his little farm, nearly six feet high and containing over 100 grown bolls with not one open, But little corn has been harvested up to this time, it being considered rather green to house in bulk. It is reported that Mr. C. R. Greene is likely to lose some of his gathering it too green Mr. Jim Parsons has an acre that has been judged to make between 40 and 45 bushels of corn and a lot of pumkins.

Sweet potatoes are being harvested and used freely, but the crop is conin this section. We will have but little farm products to sell beyond what we need, except cotton.

If the Alliance can succeed in raising the price of cotton and partially reduce the price of meat and breadstuffs, it certainly would give great relief to the toiling farmers. It looks like this could be accomplished by reducing our cotton crops one third and increasing our other grops as much as possible. To reduce cotton one third would decrease A little capital is necessary to run

By reducing the cotton crop one third, it would enable us to come nearer running on the cash system. It looks like this plan of reduction of acreage would it could be extended. Then probably, we could get along without calling on the government for help in any shape. I don't believe the government has means to help for we are taxed to keep IT up instead of It's being taxed to keep the

It is a Good Hule.

Charlotte Chroniele

Mecklenburg has adopted a rule for her youthful criminals that perhaps no other county in the State has adopted.

When a young boy, who with proper traning might be caused to reform and be service to himself and country is convicted of crime, the county asks that the boy be given a chance, and be bound to some good man who will give him a good home and proper instruction, and thus be given "grace" and not punish him until a second offense.

By this way many hoys who were convicted have been brought up to be useful men, who, otherwise per hape, would have been worse after years of prison life had multiplied upon them 70000 Value

There are two boy criminals this term of the court, and Chronicle understands they will be treated as youthful criminals heretofore were treated.
