GREAT POMP AND SPLENDOR Absence of Black a Marked Feature of Obsequies.

London, Feb. 2 .- With every circumstance of splendid pomp befitting the obsequies of so mighty and well beloved a monarch, all that is mortal of Queen Victoria has been borne through the streets of the capital and started towards the ancient fortress place of the those adjoining towns are using every sovereigns of England. The solemn magnificence of yesterday's opening phase of these last rites was duly maintained. Perhaps the stately grandeur of today's sorrowful pageant through the swarming streets of London, with hundreds of thousands of mourners ferming a black border to the route, will never be surpassed.

There was an absence of that black eremonial generally connected with the final progress to the grave. Today the cotha was drawn by cream-colored horses. The pall was white and the uniforms of the troops and the gold trappings of the foreign sovereigns. princes and representatives, forming a glivering medley, gave brilliant coloring to the scene. The chief mourner himself, with his field marshal's uniform, even though this was partially had on by his overcoat, surrounded by his corps, helped to leaven the symbols of mourning marking the coute.

A Memorable spectacle. Never in English history has a sovereign been borne to the grave attended by so many distinguished mourners. The gathering of crowned heads surpassed those who rode in the jubilee procession. All the officers of state participated. The display of the naval and military forces reached the great total of 35,000 men. The firing of minute guns and the tolling or bells at a quarter past 11 announced to the countless multitudes who had been crowding London's muddy streets since daylight that the funera procession with the Lody or Queen Victoria had begun its passage through the

The people tought for hours for a gimpse of the coffin and the kings and others followed it. They saw a long procession of soldiers, a passing show of dazzling regalia, with a hundred royalties crowding after, and then dispersed, while all the church chimes of the city and the dirges were played.

Brilliant and Impressive. The scene at the Victoria station from early morning was most brilliant and impressive. For the day's ceremony the station was transformed into an immense reception hall. All trains were stopped before 9 o'clock, and the long platforms were covered with purple cloth. On another platform, facing tast at which the queen's train was to arrive, guards of honor, composed of binejackers and grenadier guards, were drawn up. The broad roadway separating the two was swept clean and saide , and a number of little purple platforms, from which members of the royal party were expected to mon it their horses, were placed at intervals at the side and center. Europe has seen grander royal funerals than the queen's and had a more gorgeous spectacle in the celebration of her 60 years of reign, but no episode in the Victorian era will live so deeply impressed on the memories of those who Witnessed it or participated in the cere-

The day was sombre, wet and chilly as are most of London's winter days. The cloudy sky added to the gloom of the whole city.

Dazzling Martial Scenes. At 10 o'clock an army of grooms with the horses arrived, and thenceforward distinguished British naval and military officers and foreign royalties, in dazzling uniforms, came in quick succession. The lord chamberlain and his lals, bareheaded, with their wi Wands of office, received the most distinguished personages and conducted them to a little pavilion erected on the platform. The station by that time resembled the scene at a levee. The commauder in chief of the forces, Field Marshal Earl Roberts, on a beautiful, spirited brown mare, carrying his fiel marshal's baton, at this juncture trotted into the station and became the center of interest. Then came the carriages of the queen and the princesses. The horses were ridden by postillions in scarlet jackets, with only a harrow band of crepe on their arms as a badge of the great change. The carringes were closed.

All heads were uncovered as the saloon carriage bearing the remains stopped exactly opposite the guncar-riage and King Edward, Queen Alex-andra, Emperor William and others alighted.

Then the bearer party advanced to the saloon carriage, and with his hand at the salute and standing a little in advance of the others. King Edward watched the painfully slow removal of the coffin to the guncarriage. It was finally accomplished and the pall and the regalia of the British crown were placed on the coffin. Memory Honored by Bench and Bar of Country.

A DAY DEDICATED TO LAW

Appropriate Memorial Services at Washington, Participated in by Dignitaries of the Nation-Mioquent Address by Wayne MacVengh.

Washington, Feb. 4-John Marshall of Virginia was installed as chisf justice of the United States 100 years ago today, and 10 o'clock this morning the centennial anniversary of that occasion was celebrated with impressive ceremonies in the hall of the house of representatives at the capitol. President McKinley and the member of the cabinet were the last to arrive. Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania called the assemblage to order. He stated briefly the action of congress in providing for the ceremonies and the selection of Chief Justice Fuller as presiding officer. The chief justice, in his judicial robes, was escorted to the chair by Representatives Grosvenor of Ohio and Richardson of Tennessee.

Rev. Dr. William Strother Jones of Trenton, N. J., a great-grandson of John Marshall, invoked the divine blessing. The chief justice, introducing Hon. Wayne MacVeagh, who was to deliver the cration, paid an eloquent tribute to the memory of John Marshall, which evoked hearty applause from the assemblage.

It would, indeed, have been a grave dereliction of duty if the brotherhood of American lawyers, on the bench and at the bar, had not assembled to honor with fitting observances the centennial anniversary of the entrance by John Marshall into the office of chief justice of the supreme court of the United States. It is eminently fitting that such an occasion should be honored by the presence of distinguished senators and representtives in congress of the states. whose proper and abiding place in our governmental system was determined by him; by the presence of members of that illustrious tribunal the vast extent of whose rightful juristiction was determined by him; by the presence of the chief magistrate and members of the cabinet, whose subjection to the law was determined by him, and by other citizens of the country, which, under his dorming hand, instead of becoming a dissoluble confederacy of discordan states, became a great and indissoluble nation, endowed with all the powers necessary to enable it not only to protect itself against enemies at home or abroad, but also to accept and discharge the splendid and ennobling mission which has been confided to it in the divine purpose for the education of the world, and which he recognized when first of all men he spoke of the empire of America—that of securing to the whole American continent 'government

"When we come at last to believe that the true mission of nations, as of men, is to promote righteousness on earth-that conferring liberty is wiser than making gain; that new friends are better for us than new markets; that love is more elevated than hatred; that peace is nobler than war; that the hum-blest human life is sacred; that the humblest human right should be respected-then our own beloved country can worthily discharge the sacred mission confided to her, and by her true dignity and grandeur, setting her feet upon the shining pathway which leads to the sunlit summits of the olive mountains, and taking abundant care that every human creature beneath her starry flag, of every color and condition, is as secure of liberty, of justice and of peace as in the republic of God. In cherishing these aspirations and in striving to realthese aspirations and in striving to realize them, we are wholly in the spirit of the great chief justice, and we can in no other way so effectually honor his memory as by laboring, in season and out of season, to make this whole continent of America 'one vast and splendid

FEDERAL BUILDINGS SOUTH Increased Appropriations For Some in

Course of Construction. ATLANTA, Feb. 2.- A Washington dispatch says: Speaker Henderson has declared himself emphatically against the passage of any new public building bills by the present congress. This seems to settle the fate of the Atlanta bill for the present, at least. The house committee on public buildings at its meeting con-sidered only those projects which are now under way and for which an in-
