According to official information, 30 persons were killed and 60 others seriously injured. Many of the latter will die. Of the 300 passengers on the train, it is stated that only half escaped unhurt. The train, which was composed of two engines and 15 coaches, was crossing the bridge when the couplings between the engine broke. The second engine left the track and fell, followed by the entire train, into the bed of the river. Fortunately, the water was low. The nearest medical attendance was a mile and a half distant and those passengers who were least injured aided the others and did all possible until the arrival of relief trains bringing nurses, doctors and soldiers from Bilbao.

The train fell 50 feet from the bridge to the river bed, the coaches piling up in a mass of splintered wood and iron work. The scene is described as horrible down the stream, which was actually red with blood. It was found impossible to extricate numbers of the injured who were pinned under the wreckage. A railway guard was arrested in the act of robbing the dead and narrowly escaped lynching.

It is believed that the official figures underestimate the number of the killed, some accounts giving the number of dead as 100. The full extent of the catastrophe will only be known when the wreckage has been cleared away.
