Application for entry as second-class matter at the post office at Sylva, N. C., pending.

Sylva, N. C., Tuesday, May 10, 1926.

Another carload of Jersey cows is a sign that Jackson farmers are still on the right road.

Jersey cows and poultry will save the day for the farmer if properly attended to.

At the present rate Jackson's main highways will soon be hard-surfaced, and then look out for the people from other parts of the country to come teaming in here.

A large number have subscribed for THE RURALITE; but there is still room for more yet. The Ruralite gives all the news that it possibly can get hold of. Now if there is not enough news in it to suit you just let us know what is going on in your section.

Sylva will soon be a paved town. just watch her spread herself then.

COMBINING HOME, CHURCH, AND SCHOOL

In the outset, the home should be considered the foundation of all three. The child gets his foundation for all educational and moral good in the home. The home should entertain religious and educational ideals. It should stand for all that is good in human life and welfare.

In order to make it possible to unite the home, church, and school the people must realize the necessity of so doing. This may be done by educating the people. The parents must realize that the home is the real foundation of all. As they become aware of the importance of the home, and its relation to the church and school, they will back the movement and help to force any plan for uniting the three more firmly.

People should realize that the home, church, and school are working with the same people, so why not work together? All are working for the common good of humanity. It is time that the three concentrate their efforts and cooperate in bringing peace and harmony throughout the country.

Rural communities suffer from lack of a civic center wherein things of general interest might be discussed. The mind is broadened by social contact. The modern young people crave variety in their lives. They cannot have the same amusements as those in the city, so we must give them something to reconcile them in their homes. There are many things seem isolated in a sense that will make for a better unity of the three institutions. Socials may be given in either home, church or school. The church should not stand aloof, sphinx like, and see the younger generation participate in those things that most all people enjoy in life. Churches are to help and to save. Why educate people under the church spires, give them knowledge and a desire to do, then have church stand back with a cold look and say, "They are of the world, I shall not stoop to help them. Let them come to me." The church is to save. Then let's have cooperation and all strive for the common good.

In conclusion, the teacher can do more for the unity of the three named institutions than anyone else because the teacher, in a way, directs and influences the whole community. Then if pastor, teacher, and parents can get together and pull through their combined efforts the world will gradually become a better place in which to live.

HATCHERY GETS 200 REQUESTS FOR STOCK FISH

Asheville Times....

More than 200 requests for fish to stock streams in Western North Carolina have been placed on file at Balsam hatchery, it was announced recently by J. K. Dixon, chairman of the North Carolina Fish and Game commission.

The applications outnumber the capacity of the hatchery for the summer season, it is stated, the orders will be filled in the order that they were received.

Indications of the enthusiasm of Western North Carolinians over the sections possibilities through restocking the streams with trout and protecting them show in the number of applications, Mr. Dixon declares. The fish and game commission is impressed with the results of a meeting recently held in this regard, he said.
