Postman Jumps into Flood

Water to Save Drowning Boy NASHVILLE, TENN .- A 34-yearold substitute mail carrier leaped into a flooded drainage ditch, rescued an 11-year-old boy from drowning and finished his route before changing into dry clothes.

The postman, later identified as J. H. Gilmore, 34, a substitute carrier, didn't even stop to give his name after the rescue, John Ragsdale, assistant fire chief, said. The boy, Leon Matthews, was revived by artificial respiration after he had been in the water several minutes and had been swept through a flooded 100-foot culvert. George Balthrop, homicide officer who investigated the affair, gave this account of the rescue. The boy fell into a flooded pond and was swept through the culvert into the swirling water in the ditch. Gilmore's help was sought by the lad's playmates, and he dropped his mail satchel and plunged into the muddy water.

Gilmore dragged the boy to safety, turned him over to his friends-then went on to finish his mail route despite soaked clothing.

"The worst part," Gilmore said was that my cigarettes got all wet and I didn't have a smoke."
