Tuesday for $990, an average of $66.53 per hundred pounds. Also sold Tuesday was a basket that brought the highest price here thus far. That basket of tobacco was wrappers and was sold by Otis Wright, of route 1, Tabor City, for $81 per hundred pounds. The most encouraging news for warehousemen and farmers alike thus far is the fact that a meeting Saturday to discuss and decide whether the markets in the Border Belt are to be given an extension of selling time at the end of the season.

This extension is almost a must for the smaller markets and without some kind of extension, all of the smaller markets are going to fall several million pounds under the total poundage sold in prior seasons.

Roscoe C. Coleman, in reply to a telegram sent Tuesday to F. S. Royster, president of the Bright Belt Warehousemen's Association, was notified that the meeting would be held Saturday and

The last such extension granted was in 1947 when eight days were added to the season. The 1947 season was late just like the present year and without that additional selling time then, the market would have dropped far under its usual quantity of to bacco sold.

Many farmers even yet have not finished gathering their tobacco and many haven't sold a pound anywhere thus far. ## DON'T FORGET

Don't forget that farmers sellng tobacco on the Tabor City market are going to be given $15,000 in valuable prizes on September 6. Many farmers have already sold tobacco here and are thereby entitled to the opportunity of receiving some of these fine gifts when the big celebration comes off.

Other donations have been made since the original list appeared and there will probably be a few more before September 6. If you still haven't seen a list of these gifts, take a look around the store windows in Tabor City and at the posters that have been tacked up around the countryside. Better still, there are some in the warehouses for you to look over.
