Oliver Prince, president; Lewis Gore, vice-president; and A. E. Goldfinch, secretary-treasurer, are shown discussing this year's activities at a recent meeting of the Tabor City Merchants Association at which they were installed in the important positions. A business meeting of the association will be held in the school cafeteria March 24 at which time directors will be named.

Carolina Power & Light Announces Big Community Betterment Project

A contest offering $8,750 in prizes for "Carolina's finest" towns, judged by community improvements made during this year, was announced here last week.

Details of the competition were given at a dinner sponsored by Carolina Power & Light Company, which will offer the prize money and will help to promote the contest. Theme of the project is "helping to build a Finer Carolina."

The contest is open to the 300-odd communities whose electricity is served at retail by Carolina Power & Light Company. The contest was announced simultaneously at 69 dinner meetings attended by community leaders throughout the area.

Rules for the contest were explained by L. W. Chauncey, representative of Carolina Power & Light Co. Towns wishing to compete must enter the contest by April 1, he said, and the winners will be judged for improvements made during the 12 months ending next November 1.

There will be three population groups competing for three sets of prizes of $1,000 each for the winners and $750 for the runners-up. The first group will include towns of 1,000 or less, the second towns of 1,001 to 2,500 population, and the third towns over 2,500 population. In addition, two state prizes of $1,000 each will be awarded to North Carolina's "finest" and to South Carolina's "finest," regardless of population. Thus it is possible for one town to take $2,000 in prize money. In addition, there will be 15 prizes of 100 each for honorable mention.

"Nobody loses," said Mr. Chauncey, who explained the details of the contest: "for even if your town is not one of the 23 prize winners, the competition will bring its reward in terms of civic pride and improvements for the community."

"Carolina Power & Light Company is spearheading this contest because that company's future depends upon the future of the people it serves," he explained. "There is no gimmick to it. The company expects to prosper in direct proportion to the progress and development of the area."

He explained that checks for the prize money will be made payable to the steering committee and may be applied to the future development of long-range projects under taken during the year.

The speaker pointed with pride to the state's high rank in the nation, and especially in the South in agriculture, in industrial growth, in scenic beauty and in her potential for attracting tourists. But he also stressed her relatively low per capita income and the migration of youths trained in the state to other localities that promised them greater reward for their services.

"Regardless of the progress made by North Carolina during recent years," he added, "there is still room for improvement. There is unlimited opportunity for the development of civic pride, better schools and churches, more playgrounds and parks, and an expansion of public facilities."

Mr. Chauncey suggested the best way to start a constructive program would be to conduct a survey to decide what the community already has and what it needs. Towns will be judged on the basis of just five projects, he explained, and he suggested holding community efforts to five carefully selected projects "in order not to scatter your shots."

RUDOLPH FIPPS SERIOUSLY INJURED IN FIGHT HERE

Rudolph Fipps and Bill Norris, both of Tabor City, fought a drunken fight with a knife and cue stick at a local pool room Saturday afternoon late that ended with Fipps being seriously injured with a brain concussion.

Fipps was in the Veterans Hospital in Columbia, S. C., this morning and believed to be slightly improved although still in critical condition. He had not spoken since Sunday until late Tuesday and had been completely berserk much of this time.

Warrants have been sworn out for both men. Fipps is charged with public drunkenness and assault and Norris is charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.

Reports of the fight have been widely divergent but eye witness accounts of the fracas indicate that it was something on this order.

Fipps and Norris both reportedly were drinking and an argument started between them. Fipps allegedly took a hold of Norris' coat and Norris slapped him. This incident was believed by bystanders to be strictly of a playful nature. However, as the argument continued, witnesses say that Norris struck Fipps with his fist, knocking him down and out. Witnesses say Fipps lay on the floor where he was knocked for some time while operators of the pool room were endeavoring to get in touch with policemen.

Reportedly, Fipps finally got to his feet, went into the back of the pool hall and Norris remained in the front. Fipps then is said to have returned to the front with his knife and slashed at Norris' back. Norris moved forward slightly and the knife cut through his coat, shirt and undershirt but did not actually injure him.

Witnesses say that Fipps then ran into the back of the pool room with Norris chasing him around tables. Norris is said to have picked up a cue stick while chasing Fipps who was by then heading for the front door. Fipps ran into the front door, breaking the glass and falling down.

At this point witnesses say Norris overtook him and struck him across the head with the cue stick. He allegedly then kicked him out onto the sidewalk where he struck him again "between the eyes."

Policemen arrived several minutes later and carried Fipps to jail. Policemen say that Fipps walked into the jail at 7:30 and that he did not ask for a doctor that he was kept in jail until 1:00. He was released. Policemen say that he also walked out of the jail and that they found no bruises on him except a bruised eye and did not consider his condition serious. However, they say they did look for a doctor but could not locate one.

Policemen said that the rumor that there was no fire in the jail during the time he was there was false and that there was fire in the heater.

Fipps was carried home and on Sunday became seriously ill. He was carried to the Columbus County hospital twice Sunday but allegedly was told that nothing consequentially was wrong with him. However, he became irrational after the second visit and could not talk. He spoke no more from the time he left the hospital in Whiteville Sunday until Tuesday afternoon. During this time he was partially paralyzed.

Meantime he had been rushed to Columbia where an emergency brain operation was performed to remove a blood clot. Doctors told persons there that his condition was almost hopeless, however, he was showing some slight improvement Tuesday night.
