THE SENATOR'S TOGA IS SHOWING

By Bob White of the U.S. Press Association

In the continuous struggle to catch up with our reading, we have just come across a diatribe by Senator Willis Smith, (Dem.) of North Carolina, on page 8470 of the Congressional Record of June 27th. It is on the subject of "canned" editorials in "small" newspapers, and which he considers a species of lobbying. Obviously, the particular editorial (approving the presidential veto of the new Immigration Act) to which he referred, ran counter to his own sentiments.

It so happens our own views on this legislation are similar to Senator Smith's but we can not accept his disparagement of "canned" editorials without squirming, or agree that the use of such syndicated material is "lobbying", or that it is by any means confined to "small" papers.

The Senator's attitude, we feel is ungracious to those who toil over such editorials, and unflattering to the grass-roots editors of America, who, as we may have mentioned before, we place at the very top of our citizenry in intelligence, responsibility and patriotism, to say nothing of selfless public service.

We know of no editor who will run an editorial that violates his principles or his conscience. We know of no contract that requires him to do so. And certainly, Senator Smith himself will recognize (when he stops to think about it) that difference of opinion are equally essential to a free press, and to the usefulness of the U. S. Senate.

As for the "lobbying" charge, this activity, we have always believed, is the practice of exerting direct and personal pressure on legislators on behalf of a client or employer. It is poles apart from presenting a controversial viewpoint editorially in the press. A newspaper worthy of the name has influence with its readers. It has influence because those readers respect the judgment and integrity of the editor, and are therefore impressed with his views on national problems and look to him for clarification of puzzling issues and policies. If his editorials are honest and convincing, and readers make their agreement with his opinions known to their Congressmen, that is true democracy-in-action.

The fact that the overworked editor may present his views in the words of another writer has nothing to do with the case. The country editor, and the city editor as well, who uses syndicated material in which he has confidence, is in the same impeccable position as Mr. Sulzberger of the New York Times in relying on his staff of editorial writers.

Your County Agent Says

The regular armyworm has appeared in a few fields in Columbus County. Pastures in the Bethel section are being eaten up by armyworms.

While the infestations are not widespread in any area growers are urged to examine their fields immediately and at frequent intervals. If stripping of the leaves is evident check the base of the plants at the ground level as the caterpillars hide during the day and feed late in the evening. Fields having heavy, dense foliage are most likely to be infested. Corn or other crops near grain fields should be watched for migration of the worms. Grass in fence rows and along the roadway is often stripped when the pest develops in such areas.

The adult stage, the armyworm moth, lays its eggs in the heavy, dense, grassy undergrowth. The worms when they first hatch are very small but in a few days will develop into worms 1 1/2 inches long. Worms 1/2 inch long will feed for a week to 10 days.

A poisoned bait, spread late in the evening at the rate of about 15 lbs. of wet bait to the acre, will be found effective. It is made by mixing 1 lb. paris green or white arsenic (dry) with 25 lbs. wheat bran (one-half of the bran may be substituted with sawdust). Mix 1 pint of molasses with 2 gallons of water and stir into bran poison mixture. Add sufficient water to make a crumbly mass which can be spread by hand. Broadcast evenly throughout the infested areas. Do not leave in piles. Spread all the bait each day. There will be no harm to wildlife if spread properly. This mixture may be used where dust or spray equipment is not available or where insecticide residue may be a hazard on crops.

ONE-FIFTH OF NATION DREADS AUGUST

Hay fever sufferers—now estimated to constitute an "ill-nosed one-fifth of the nation" — have about given up expecting any relief through medical or weedpulling projects as Awful August approaches once more.

But spokesmen for one of the nation's newest and fastest-growing industries are sounding a confident note of hope. Air conditioning, they say, definitely is the answer.

According to John A. Gilbreath, head of the air conditioning division at Servel, all-year air conditioning will provide complete relief because the filtering system used with the equipment is guaranteed to remove 100 per cent of the pollen particles in a home.

Spot checks by Servel engineers of homes equipped with all-year air conditioning have confirmed laboratory findings, he reports, adding that the filters will remove dust particles even smaller than the pollen.

"As a matter of fact we have found that most of the people who purchased the equipment did so for the relief from hay fever and asthma rather than for luxury living," the Evansville, Ind., executive said.

One reason the subject of hay fever has become of such nationwide interest in recent years, he added, is because of the trend toward suburban living. Many people, of necessity, have had to buy homes in the suburbs because these were the only ones available. The result has been, in his words, "an increasing exposure of people to ragweed and a sharp increase in the number of victims."

Until recently, he said, medical authorities suggested injections with drugs but these were both expensive and time-consuming because of frequent trips to the doctor for administration.

Gilbreath said that one Chicago physician, who is an authority on the subject of hay fever, had summed up medical findings on the subject with: "Unfortunately there is little opportunity for complete escape from grass pollen except by staying indoors with the windows and doors shut."

"While this doctor was being ironic, he was actually talking about all-year air conditioning since the windows and doors must be shut if the equipment is to be effective and if economy of operation is to be realized."

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Kelly of Orlando, Fla. were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Long last week. A 2-C Albro Stevens is here on a leave from Maxwell Air Force Base.
