YOUNG WOMAN MEETS TRAGIC TRAIN DEATH.

The train bearing Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan and Mrs. Bryan and United States Senator Luke Lea, of Tennessee, to Asheville yesterday morning, ran over and instantly killed Miss Annie E. Williams, age 30, of Gainesville, Fla. It is said that her head was almost decapitated by the train, Southern No. 15. The accident occurred at Swannanoa, a few miles out on a trestle.

Miss Williams, who was a summer visitor, started across a small trestle, so it seems, just before hearing the train approaching, and a little boy her nephew, who was with the unfortunate young woman, drew back and was saved. The engineer was prevented from seeing the young woman upon the trestle in time to stop the engine so it is claimed.

The body of Miss Williams was carried to a house nearby and will be conveyed to her Florida home, probably today, for interment.

The story below is an account of the sad accident as told by the correspondent of the Asheville Citizen at Black Mountain.

OTHER DETAILS GIVEN.

Black Mountain, July 12.—(Special)—Miss Annie Williams was instantly killed by Southern railway train No 15 at 10 o'clock this morning near the depot at Swannanoa on train No 21 from Asheville, having arrived there last night over the Carolina Special from her home in Gainesville, Fla. She was coming to the mountains in an effort to avoid the intense heat of her home and spend her annual vacation at the Harrison home at Swannanoa.

Miss Williams left the depot and walked east on the track toward the boarding house and had reached the middle of a trestle, about three hundred yards from the depot, when the train came out of a cut a head of her with no warning except the roar of the engine. She had no time to jump before the engine struck her. The young woman was picked up by a train crew under the trestle 20 feet below.—Citizen.
