JACKSON COUNTY FAIR

BY R. F. JARRETT.

The folks of Jackson county held a fair one day, Which some good folks attended while others stayed away.

Some men took their children, while others took the wife To help make this occasion the grandest one of life.

The soldier led the grand parade, though tottering now is he, The children marched a thousand strong, but where was Cullowhee? The Normal and Industrial School was nowhere to be seen Except one splendid speaker, this was Professor Dean.

The people of old Jackson lay down one night to dream, They saw within the vision the women past them stream, The handiwork they carried, was wrought with skill and care Which demonstrated to us, they love old Jackson's Fair.

The corn and fruit and cereals were were fine as fine could be And this delighted one and all, save those who would not see. The cattle were the finest, and many, many more Paraded round the old fair ground than ever came before.

The music and the ball games, the races rich and rare Excelled those shown before this, at Jackson County Fair.

It made me feel so little, when I looked round to see

So many country products, but none placed there by me.

And then I woke a moment, but laid me down to rest

To dream of days departed, and those who'd wrought the best, And lo! the little children by all the world are bless'd.

And in their toil and labor, by far lead all the rest.

says Mrs. Sylvania Woods, of Clifton Mills, Ky., in writing of her experience with Cardui, the woman's tonic.
