Second class matter at the Postoffice at Waynesboro, N. C.

FRIDAY, JULY 20, 1923.

Wheat has reached subnormalcy.

"China Arms." Yes, but they are easily broken.

Drops in farmers' prices make oceans of discontent.

80 cent wheat makes the farmer feel 30 cents less than that.

The greatest menace is the fellow who is always howling menace.

They appear to have been somewhat "het up" out in Minnesota.

The French are inclining to the opinion that Baldwin is just an old crab.

It looks as if the next presidential campaign may become an automobile race.

The London fog is making a good substitute for a smoke-screen for world politics.

The old line politicians classify Minnesota as a bucolic state, with the accent on the colic.

Personally we have never been enough of a fighter to relish the idea of scrapping warships.

All this diplomatic snarl revolves itself into the doughboys' familiar question of "who won the war."

What the South American did to Willard aint a circumstance to what Europe did to the price of wheat.

"In View of His Wife Man Shoots Himself." We have an inkling that others are tempted to, for the same reason.

The prevailing opinion in the Philippines appears, from this distance, to be that General Wood's last name refers to his head.

The smart young fellow who prepares the "What's Goin' On In This World O' Ourn" column in the Greensboro Daily News should be informed by some friends, in as gentle manner as possible, that Waynesboro is in Georgia, while Waynesville is in Haywood county, near Thickety, North Carolina.
