WATCH BROWN ROT IN PEACH ORCHARDS

Raleigh, N. C., May 24.—A good set of fruit in the peach orchard may be made worthless in a short while by inroads of brown rot and scab, two serious fungus diseases.
 "Peach brown rot is a common disease and produces a brown decay of the peach that spreads rapidly throughout the fruit tissues," explains G. W. Fant, plant disease specialist at State College. "In a few days the entire peach may become rotten and the disease causes heavy losses in poorly sprayed orchards. The brown rot spores spread the disease from affected fruits to healthy ones so that when conditions are favorable, a large part of the crop may soon become affected."
 Mr. Fant states that peach scab is also a common disease which is confined to the surface of the fruit. It frequently results in a drying and cracking of the fruit tissues under the affected area. In severe cases, where cracking occurs, the fruit is rendered worthless.

But both of these troubles may be controlled effectively by the application of suitable spray materials at the proper time. Ordinarily the peach becomes subject to brown rot and scab several weeks before ripening time. Spray applications coming about four weeks after the petals have fallen and again about four weeks before each variety is due to ripen will prevent the trouble. For these sprays the recently developed dry mixed sulphur lime or the older self-boiled lime sulphur may be used. Mr. Fant states that the spray should be so applied as to reach all parts of the fruit.

It is profitable to collect and destroy the brown rot mummies during the fall and winter as an additional control measure. At this season, however, spraying is of greatest importance and is essential where sound fruit is desired.

When we sell a man a used car we are naturally hoping that some day he will come back and buy a new car. Honesty aside, that alone seems reason enough for selling him a GOOD Used Car at a fair price.
