This, That an' Tother

By ARK RICKENS

I see by the Saturday Evening Post that the boss is comin' back. He's usin' blamed pore judgment. Where would you park a 4-cylinder, 1914 model horse in this town? They reported him as passin' and I can't see why old Charlie didn't keep a-go-in.'

You can't hardly git around with a team no more. All the creeks is run through culverts. They's no place to water and a horse can't drink out of a fillin' station hose to do no good.

The chances is he'd be so winded dodgin' automobiles that he'd need air as bad as he would water and a man hates to take water an' air without buyin' somethin' along. An' fill in' stations ain't turnin' down any cash business. I ast one t'other day if they was many people passin' and he says 's'e yes, too dog gone many.

But old Spark Plug come in handy a long time. They say he was one time a little bit of a feller with three toes like a chicken. They called him Whoa-hippus or some such of a name—I must ast the postmaster about that, he's a man of letters—and I reckon the cave-dwellin' livery stable man had to put roosts in the stalls. But he's mighty near it played out on the highways, and thirty year from now they'll probably be old women who'll remember that a whip socket was to wrop the lines around, but they'll be mighty few.

If a feller wants his horse shod now, he pops into a garage, blows his three kinds of horns and yells: "Service, minnahurry. Take this old un off and put it up. Put a new un on and put it down. How long'll it take?" An then when he gits to where he goes at 45 milcs a hour, he runs to a drug store and stands forty minutes.

Jevver think, a man is like a egg; you never know whether he's any good er not till he's been broke. Well a mule's purty much the same way. Hoping you are the same,

ORGANIZE THE FARM FOR BEST PROFITS

Raleigh, N. C. August 23.—It is possible to so organize the farm business that it may return the owner the greatest profits.

Such is the conclusion reached by Dr. G. W. Forester, agricultural economist at State College, who has just prepared bulletin number 252, "Profitable Farm Combinations" based on studies made in the coastal plain section of North Carolina. The bulletin is issued by the North Carolina Experiment Station and is available to farmers of the State free of cost.

"To show how the farm may be organized, we have presented in this bulletin certain definite combinations of crop and livestock enterprises," says Dr. Forester. "These combinations are called standards. While they are not actual farms, they have been developed from accurate information carefully gathered from farms now being operated in the lower coastal plain. As a standard, we have selected that combination of crop and livestock enterprises for a given amount of land, labor and other items which appears to be the most profitable under conditions not only as they exist on these farms today but also in the years immediately ahead."

Dr. Forester makes it clear that these standards are to be used as guides to those who may want to reorganize their farms. Normal prices have been used in fixing the standards and some changes might be made annually based on the reports issued by the federal and state authorities. Especially valuable in this, is the outlook for crops and livestock which is prepared each year about February first. However, as a usual thing, farmers should organize their farms on a long time basis and drastic changes in operation should not be made unless economic conditions change radically.

The National Dentists' Association is told that there are only 20 sets of perfect natural teeth in all America which indicates that the dental business is a howling big success.

Don't put it off, put it on, say extension agronomists in referring to the use of lime this fall.

One farmer who fed nine hogs last year according to the Shay method will go in with his neighbors to feed a carload this year. He has recently placed a cooperative order for a carlot of fish meal.

Over 1,600 club members in North Carolina have taken part in the 30 club encampments and tours held so far this summer.

Banks of Granville county are financing the buying of three carloads of pure bred Jersey cattle for farmers of the county.
