

JACKSON CO. JOURNAL

DAY TOMPKINS, Editor

Published Weekly By the JACKSON COUNTY JOURNAL CO

Entered as second class matter at Sylva, N. C.

After all, Al returned to New York without seeing Sylva. At any rate, his intentions were good; but his vacation was cut short and unseasonable weather prevented trout fishing.

Al Smith told the New York papers that he found the Carolina Mountain people to be the same kind of folks he had been meeting and shaking hands with in New York all his life. And here we had been hoping that we weren't as bad as all that.

The successful farm must have more than one source of cash income. Dr. Poe, Editor of the Progressive Farmer, recently stated a mighty truth in his creation—"With garden, cow and fifty hens, and hogs that graze—not housed in the pens, the farmer's prosperity begins."

A FINE CLASS

One of the finest spectacles that we have witnessed in many a day, was the graduating class of Sylva Central High School. The school and the community are to be congratulated, for it is indeed unusual to see a class of forty young women and young men receiving diplomas from a small town high school.

R. J. ROANE

In the passing, this week, of Robert J. Roane, Southwestern North Carolina lost another valuable citizen. As sheriff, as senator, as merchant, as churchman, as citizen, as friend of the friendless, as Christian gentleman, Mr. Roane made a record for himself that will live long after this generation has passed.

All this section of the state feels keenly the passing of this good man.

SMITH BRINGS OUT THE POKEBERRY

The prospective visit of Al Smith to Sylva caused Dan Tompkins, the progressive editor of the Jackson County Journal, to bring out his pokeberry ink and use it across the top of his front page, with its brilliant color, forcing all readers to take notice that the town is to be visited by the noted wet, Catholic democratic candidate for the presidency. That's just a sample of how, "Ale," as our Sassafras Jimmie would put it, is commanding the attention of the country wherever he visits.

COWS AND BANKS

It is reported that Clayton County is the only county in Iowa that has had no bank failure during the recent period of farm depression. It has nearly thirty banks and all have weathered the financial storm.

According to the State Department of Agriculture, Clayton leads in Iowa in the production of dairy products; its butter sold last year for more than $2,000,000. It has seventeen creameries, principally owned by farmers.

The results of Clayton County clearly indicate the stabilizing force of the dairy cow; her ability to bridge periods of depression in agriculture, to make diversification possible, to stimulate a better system of agriculture and to stabilize all forces affecting the farm.—From editorial Hoard's Dairyman.

NONE OF OUR BUSINESS—BUT

We frankly admit that it is none of our business; but people, and papers frequently butt in on things that are none of their business; and we will venture an opinion on the proposal to create the new county of Walker, from parts of Macon, Clay, Cherokee, Swain and Graham counties, with Andrews as county seat.

The movement is said to have grown out of the belief in Nantahala township, Macon county, that it is not being treated as it should in regard to roads. The people of Nantahala want a better way of ingress and egress, and should have it, though no good road into the township has been provided by Macon authorities. Hence the secession movement which has grown to a proposal to establish a new county.

It is an evident fact that there are too many counties already, that multiplying them but adds to the burden of taxation of the people, and that a consolidation, in these days when it is easier to get from Hangingdog to Sylva than it was a few years ago to come from Cashier's Valley to Webster, would be more to the point.

In the face of the present day conditions, The Journal believes that the General Assembly, if it ever changes the counties, will do away with some of the smaller ones, and that in no event will another county be added to the 100 North Carolina now has.

Give the Nantahala folks a road, by all means; it is a great province, despite its political affiliations, and is entitled to a modern highway; but let's have no more talk about a new county.

8 WEEKS OLD BROILERS SOLD FOR 80 CENTS

Miss Lela Norton, of Cullowee, sold several of her 300 Barred Plymouth Rock broilers in the last earlot sale for a fancy price, and she says a good profit above cost of producing them. Some of these 8 weeks old chicks weighed two pounds and at 40c per lb. brought 80c each. This shows what can be done with early chicks when they are really fed and cared for the right way.

BALSAM

Rev. J. T. Carson conducted funeral services at the Crawford cemetery Monday afternoon for George Smathers, Jr., who was fatally wounded in a wreck Saturday night. George Smathers, Louis McCall, Benjamin and Robert Bryson were on their way to Waynesville, on Mr. R. J. Bryson's truck. Robert was driving and just before reaching Mr. Grayson Hall's the truck suddenly left the road and dashed into a small empty building, after which the boy, knew very little and were taken to the Waynesville hospital where George died in about two hours. The scalp was torn almost entirely off Benjamin's head and he is still in the hospital. Louis is also still in the hospital and badly hurt but not believed to be seriously injured. Robert is at home suffering from the shock and hurt in the back and internal injuries, but not serious. Mr. Hall helped get the boys out of the wreck and had their parents notified of the accident. The truck was almost completely demolished. This is the third wreck at this place on Highway No. 10 between Saunook and Waynesville.

Balsam has three graduates from the Sylva High School this year: Misses Evelyn Green Nell Bryson and Mr. Glenn Parris.

Our graded school closed with appropriate exercises Wednesday night, a program that was rendered with much credit to teachers and pupils. Many were promoted to other grades. Mr. Charlie Bryson's fine milch cow died last week.
