The governor of Tennessee appointed William E. Brock to the United States Senate. The governor must be of the opinion that the senate needs sweetening.

America is a nation that recognizes all vocations—a soldier dies, and he is succeeded in the United States senate by a manufacturer of confectionaries.

President Hoover is to launch a movement to establish a school and do away with illiteracy in the Virginia mountains. If he is as successful in abolishing ignorance in Virginia as he has been in abolishing poverty in the country, we will expect every inhabitant of our neighbor State to the north to be able to read Sanskrit in a fortnight.

SIMMONS GOES DEMOCRATIC

Senator F. M. Simmons has gone democratic.

The papers tell us that the Senator is to lead the fight against the tariff bill as passed by the house and agreed upon by the Republican members of the senate committee.

Time was when the announcement that Senator Simmons had gone democratic would have caused no stir in the political waters of North Carolina. The announcement now, however, to our mind, brings about a deal of complication in the State.

A few moons back the Republicans of North Carolina would throw their hats into the air and yell themselves hoarse every time a spell-binder mentioned the name of Simmons. To the Republican mind, a few months ago, Senator Simmons was the one great asset of pureness-of-heart in all Tar-heelia.

Now he appears in the role of the leader of the forces that oppose the pure-in-heart.

The complication arises as to where the new-found friends of the Senator will place their allegiance. Will they follow their Apostle in his attack upon the worshippers of the sacred cow of protective tariff? Or will they align themselves with the leaders of Republicanism in the senate?

It has been strongly hinted that if Senator Simmons should be defeated in a Democratic primary, that the Republicans would insist upon sending him back to the Senate as an independent. What, now would it avail them to return to the Senate the main thorn-in-the-flesh of the big protectionists? It might break up, to some extent, the Democratic organization in North Carolina; but surely a higher motive than that actuates the party. The Senator is capable of making a superb fight on the tariff matter. It is here that he is at home, more than in religious politics. Will the fact that he is to carry on the attacks against the highest tariff in the history of the Union tend to heal the wounds left in the ranks of the Democracy of North Carolina, and will the sting of the spectacle of the Senior Senator fighting on the other side, a few months ago be soothed with the present salvo? Or will the regular Democrats remember that the man who so ardently preached party regularity, deserted the ship in the time of great need?

Perhaps the present regularity of the Senator will prevent his having opposition in the primary next spring, and perhaps it won't.

Either way, it is a complication. There are numerous Democrats who do not want a primary fight between Mr. Simmons and somebody. On the other hand, there are numerous Democrats who will not be satisfied unless they are given an opportunity to vote against the Senator in a primary of their own party. Many of them, if they are not given such an opportunity, will take it in the general election. Altogether, the expected announcement that Mr. Simmons has gone Democratic again will cause a lot of political figuring, especially among the would be candidates for Mr. Simmons' toga.

THE LABOR TROUBLES

It is a matter of great regret to every patriotic North Carolinian that the soiled linen of our labor disputes is being laundered before the eyes of the world.

Within recent years our State has been the recipient of much favorable publicity, all of which was well merited.

We are now coming into our share of notoriety, and it should very greatly concern us as to whether or not that, too is merited.

We have done much in North Carolina, in fact we have accomplished wonders; but it may be that we have builded so rapidly that our structure has become somewhat lopsided. It may be that D. A. Tompkins and the others who preached an industrialism in the State, did their work too well, and that we have accepted the advantages of an industrialism, without giving heed to the dangers of such a civilization, and intrenching ourselves in our position, as we went along. Maybe we have not paid enough attention to humanitarianism.

Most reforms that are just come in the process of economic evolution, and would come without agitation and upheaval.

If the present disturbances serve any good purpose, either to labor or to capital, or to the State, which is doubtful, they will direct the attention of the thinking people of the State to a study of the problems that industrialism must of necessity bring to a people, and the thought of honest North Carolinians, when rightly brought to bear upon it, can solve any problem.

One trouble may be that too many mills are owned and operated by foreign capital, which does not understand our people. We do not believe that any serious defections will arise between North Carolina employers and North Carolina employees.

On the other hand, it is just as probable that much of the trouble is brought about by imported agitators of trouble.

Why not both sides agree for the Governor of North Carolina to appoint a commission of North Carolinians, in whom every body in the State has confidence, let the commission go into all the ramifications of the situation, and lay before the people a foundation upon which we can build in fairness to both those who contribute their labor, and those who furnish the capital?

Either side that would dare to refuse to abide by the decision of such a commission would be doomed to defeat, because that side would have to reckon with public opinion, which, after, all is the most powerful factor in the settlement of such disputes.

We should dig down through the muck of the present situation, and find solid rock upon which to build our economic structure.

We can think of no better way than that suggested.

It is time for North Carolina to take firm hold upon the situation.

"THE DANCE OF LIFE" AT PLAZA NEXT WEEK

"The Dance of Life" Paramount's all-talking and singing screen version of the famous New York stage success, "Burlesque," will be shown at the Plaza Theatre in Asheville, N. C., during the week of September the 9th. Heading the cast is Hal Skelly, the original star of the stage play, who makes his debut on the talking screen in the same role he created on Broadway. Playing opposite Skelly is Nancy Carroll, the youthful star of "Shopworn Angel" and "Close Harmony."

"The Dance of Life," is a lavish eye-filling production, replete with many beautiful sets, including scenes of the "Follies," photographed in natural colors, and a chorus of vivacious, good looking dancing girls. Some of the numbers featured in the show are "Flippity Flop," destined to be one of the song hits of the season, effectively put one by Babe Kawi, musical comedy favorite, "Ladies of the Dance," "Cuddlesome Baby," sung by Nancy Carroll, and "True Blue Lou," one of the hits of the show, effectively rendered by Hal Skelly.

Skelly, of course, besides being a fine actor, is one of the best known comedians and eccentric dancers on the stage today. His dance routine is inimitable, and is sure to delight audiences everywhere.

The leading feminine role is effectively played by Nancy Carroll. Miss Carroll also sings in charming
