

Roosevelt And Garner Are Nominated By Democrats At Chicago Convention

Plan To Cut Armies Would Save Billions

Washington, D. C., July 6.—Outside of political parties, which still waver largely around the question of prohibition, the most important subject of discussion here is still President Hoover's invitation to the world to reduce their armaments to their "proper complement," to abolish bombing planes, to reduce other naval craft to a quarter of their present tonnage and to abolish tanks, large mobile guns and chemical warfare, and so reduce the cost of military and naval expenditures by one-third. This would save the people of the world from the expenditure of a billion wasted dollars, the President estimated.

Who expects the rest of the world to accept this proposal in full, but it is the belief of those in closest touch with foreign sentiment that it will have a powerful effect on the Disarmament Conference.

Relief Bills Far Apart

But for the relief bill, which is the final act in the Congressional comedy, will go toward reducing taxes is still another question. Each house has passed a bill authorizing the raising of a couple of billions by bond issues for use in public works and for loans to states for relief work. The President has said he doesn't like either bill in so far as it provides for the use of such funds for non-paying public works, which would merely add to the taxpayers' burden. The bills as passed by the House and the Senate were so far apart, and both of them so far from anything Mr. Hoover approves, that as this is written it is rather doubtful whether anything will come of this movement at all.

Furlough For Pay Cut

Federal employees are breathing a sigh of relief over the adoption of the "furlough" plan of reducing their salaries, instead of the proposed ten per cent cut. They have to take a month off each year without pay, but that is only an eight and one-third per cent cut, and a large proportion of them have families outside of the District of Columbia who would be glad to have them come home for a visit of two months. Most of them get one month's vacation with pay anyway.

Army Prodigals

The problem of the "B. E. F." during Bonus Expeditionary Force, which still camped on the marshy banks of the Eastern Branch of the Potomac is a difficult one. Efforts are being made to get the states to which these 20,000 ex-servicemen came to provide for their re-education.

An observer who talked with many of these men found them the dependent type, bred in industrial centers, who have always had somebody to look after them and don't know how to face the world when they are not on a payroll. They remember that when they were in the Army or Navy they had three good meals a day, clothing and shelter, and they have turned to Uncle Sam like the prodigal son to his parents. Everybody is sorry for them, but nobody seems to know just what to do.

Washington hotel and business men are hoping there will be a little publicity about their departure as there was about their arrival. They say that the impression prevails that the city is terrorized by the B. E. F. and tourists are passing by Washington. There is no occasion for anyone to stay away from Washington on that account. It is the most peaceable crowd that the city has ever seen, and they stick pretty closely to their encampment.

Borah And His Bolt

Senator Borah didn't surprise anybody, much, when he made an impromptu speech reading himself out of the Republican party because of prohibition plank. The Senator from Idaho doesn't like the plank because it opens the door to the repeal of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Governor of New York, and John N. Garner, of Texas, Speaker of the House of Representatives, are the nominees of Democracy for President and Vice President, respectively.

Roosevelt was nominated on the fourth ballot last Friday night, after William G. McAdoo, of California, had addressed the convention and cast the votes of California and Texas for Roosevelt. These two States had been pledged to Garner, and had been voted for him on the first three ballots, on Thursday night, just prior to the adjournment of the Convention. Garner released them during the day, and the anti-Roosevelt lines crumbled, making way for his nomination by an overwhelming majority, 945 votes out of the 1148. He had held a good majority from the first but not enough to give him the two-thirds.

Roosevelt cast aside tradition and precedent, and flew from Albany to Chicago, where he was greeted by thousands, and appeared before the convention to deliver his speech of acceptance. He stated that he did not see the interest of economy, that it would have cost a great deal for a committee from the states and provinces to come to Albany for formal notification and acceptance.

Garner was nominated for vice president by acclamation.

UNION MEETING UNDER WAY AT SYLVA METHODIST CHURCH

A Union Meeting, consisting of a series of evangelistic services, is under way at the Methodist church, this week, in which both the Methodist and Baptist churches are participating, and Rev. W. L. Griggs, pastor of the Ninth Avenue Baptist church, in Charlotte, is doing the preaching.

Mr. Griggs is a native of Macon county. He is well known in Sylva, having conducted a meeting in the Baptist church here in 1920.

The membership of the two churches, and the pastors, extend a most cordial invitation to everyone to attend the services, which began on last Sunday, and will continue for two weeks.

The hours of preaching are 10 o'clock in the mornings and 8 in the evenings.

the Eighteenth Amendment, and he is the most stalwart of "drys." His friends are pointing out that it wasn't necessary for him to bolt the party, since the Chicago Republican platform explicitly declares that adherence to that particular plank shall not be a test of party loyalty. Senator Borah's enemies are quoting a remark attributed to Calvin Coolidge, when the former President learned that the man from Idaho rides horseback every morning. "I don't see how Borah and the horse ever agree which way to go," he said, which epitomizes the Idaho Senator's well-known tendency to get on the opposite side of every question.

Silver Lining in Finance

Senator Pittman's bill to authorize the Government to buy a billion and a half ounces of silver, coin it into silver dollars and issue silver certificates against it may or may not become law. It would bring the ratio of silver to gold in our treasury up to where it was when the present law, authorizing the issue of 500,000 of silver certificates, was adopted. Then we had about a billion dollars in gold reserves; now we have about four billions.

Whatever happens to that proposal, there is a strong belief that the Summer will see a rehabilitation of silver to the position it occupied as money before the war, through international agreement. Plans are all laid for an international conference, probably in London, before the end of September.

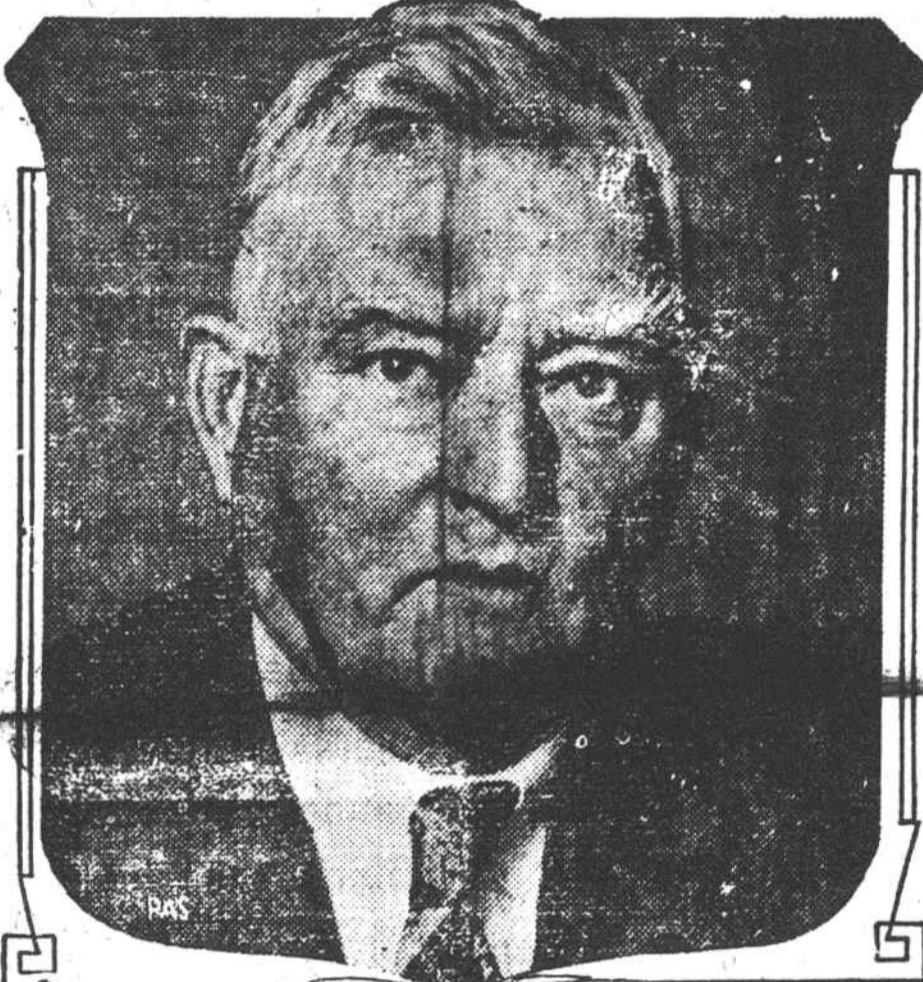

That would send up the price of silver and put the silver nations on more nearly an equal basis with the nations in international trade. That, in turn, would send up commodity prices and greatly help to bring back business and employment.

Reynolds Sweeps State In Second Primary Saturday; Lead Mounts To 103,000

TODAY and TOMORROW

(By Frank Parker Stockbridge)

Man
There is plenty of evidence that the types of human beings which now inhabit the earth are not the only animals of our species that ever lived. In Sumatra the natives have long known of the existence of a tribe of ap-men, who live in an inaccessible mountain country. One of these was recently shot, although it is illegal to kill them, and the body has been sent to Holland for examination by scientists, who think these 'orang letjos' may be survivors of one of the races which preceded the modern man in the earth.

In the Sahara desert the bones of several members of a race, which was much like, yet curiously unlike human beings of today, have just been unearthed. Similar discoveries over many years in Germany, France, China, and South Africa lead to the belief that not one but several different species of humans and near-humans once inhabited many parts of the world.

Perhaps the folk-myths of giants, saiyrs and earth-dwelling gnomes have come down from remote times when survivors of these primitive types came into contact with our own ancestors, who themselves were better able to survive the changing rigors of a developing world because of their superior agility and brain capacity.

Frankfurter

In Washington, during the War, irreverent newspaper men used to call him the "Happy Sausage." That is a somewhat strained translation of Felix Frankfurter's name, since "Felix" is good Latin for "Happy" and everybody knows that a frankfurter is a sausage!

But the same men who nicknamed him used to also say that he had the best-functioning set of brains in Washington, and that was saying a good deal in a time when Woodrow Wilson and Newton D. Baker were both there and using theirs.

Felix Frankfurter's appointment by Governor Ely to the Supreme Court of Massachusetts has started a storm of protest, because he was the champion of Sacco and Vanzetti, whose execution for murder was regarded by the radicals of the world as due to their Communist activities rather than to any real proof of their guilt.

Frankfurter, since 1914 a professor in Harvard Law School, believed the two men were innocent, and said so. That put him on the "black list" of the conservatives of Boston, who were sure the men were guilty because they were Communists. But great lawyers, judges and statesmen call Felix Frankfurter, the Austrian Jew who came to America at the age of twelve, one of the ablest legal minds in the world.

Sanders

Like speaker Garner, Everett Sanders, the new chairman of the Republican National Committee, was born in a log cabin. He was a member of Congress from Indiana when President Coolidge made him his secretary. In that job he won from Mr. Coolidge the high praise that he was a "man of great ability and discretion."

Sanders started life as a cobbler in shoe store, and sold more shoes than anybody else who ever worked there. Perhaps, his friends say, that is one reason why he understands people from the ground up.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION TO BE JULY 14th, AT DILLSBORO

The Jackson County Sunday School Convention, held under the auspices of the North Carolina Sunday School Association, will meet in Dillsboro on July 14, for an all day session, according to announcement made by F. I. Watson, the president. The program for the meeting follows:
Theme: The Child, the Home and the Sunday School.
9:45 Song service, R. F. Jarrett, leader.

Robert Rice Reynolds, Buncombe county attorney, who has been running for something ever since he was old enough, has at last come into his own. On last Saturday, in the runoff primary, he defeated Senator Cameron Morrison for United States Senator by a majority of more than 103,000 votes, according to the latest tabulations.

In Jackson County Reynolds received a majority of 1261 for the short term and 1375 for the long.

Ehringhaus, high man in the first primary for governor, fell far short of the expected large vote for him and only squeezed through the second by the slim margin of 13,230. The mountain counties saved him from defeat, as huge majorities were piled up for the Elizabeth City man in nearly every county in the mountain area, and won him the nomination over Lieutenant-Governor Richard T. Fountain. The vote in Jackson is indicative of how John Christopher Blucher Ehringhaus ran in the mountains. His majority in this county was 1091, by the official tabulation.

Fletcher defeated Mitchell for Commissioner of Labor. He received a larger majority than either Ehringhaus or Reynolds in Jackson county, where the vote for him was almost unanimous. His majority was 1834 here, he receiving 1973 votes to 139 for Mitchell.

Political dopesters throughout the country have been busy ever since the North Carolina primary trying to figure out the how come of the Reynolds victory over Morrison, and, outside the State, much has been made in the papers of the fact that Morrison is a dry while Reynolds is a modificationist. However, most well informed politicians in North Carolina believe that this had little to do with the Reynolds victory. It is generally believed that Bob Reynolds' personality, his ability as a vote-getter, coupled with the resentment against Morrison because of the McNinch confirmation vote, the failure of Morrison to take a definite stand on the payment of the soldiers' bonus, and the fact that he is a very wealthy man, or rather that Mrs. Morrison is a wealthy woman, were the chief contributing factors in the down fall of Senator Morrison. Another thing that is believed to have contributed largely to the Reynolds victory is the known fact that the voters throughout the country have shown a disposition to vote out every man who now occupies a high office, every time they get a chance. They defeated Brookhart in Iowa, and have done likewise to almost all of the ins. This same disposition is expected to play a large part in winning votes for Governor Roosevelt against President Hoover in November.
