DAN TOMPKINS, Editor

So far as we are concerned, when he broke the air plane speed record Major Doolittle didn't do much; but there is an aviator as is an aviator.

Frosty air. Maybe politics will warm up. These mornings have the twang of early November or late October.

If optimism can win an election, Roosevelt is already as good as inaugurated. He went to Vermont and made a speech.

The question, since Jimmy resigned under fire, and announced his intention of seeking vindication before the people, is whether New York's late mayor will walk or run.

The latest insult to the American soldiers is Ding's cartoon depicting him, with an overseas cap and a hand full of mud in line with Red sand such, making an assault on the United States. We are ashamed that the Greenboro Daily News published it.

The soldiers may be red. They went through enough blood and fire in an attempt to save this government, to make them a glorious red; but not the kind of red that the defenders of President Hoover's action in driving them out of Washington, would lead us to believe.

CALL A COURT

A special term of Superior Court for Haywood county is in order.

The Haywood folks hold themselves in remarkable control, when a deputy sheriff was shot and killed by a Negro, wanted for an attempted assault upon a 5-year old white child.

The people will tolerate no such conduct. Haywood folks, by letting the law take its course, have done their part. Now, only speedy justice can meet the present situation. A special term of court is the only way to get speedy justice.

Haywood people, by their conduct under the most trying of circumstances have merited the calling of the special term. It is only by such prompt action that crimes of this kind, which white men in this country will not tolerate, can be suppressed, and the dignity of the law upheld. Fear and fear alone can hold brutes in check.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Charles E. Dunn

Israel Journeying Toward Canaan Lesson for September 11 - Numbers 10:11-36

Golden Text: Numbers 10:29

The children of Israel occupied about forty years in their wanderings toward the land of promise. It is surprising how unessential was their wilderness sojourn, although it was of supreme importance in laying the foundations of their religion and culture, and so preparing them for the momentous changes of their later history.

Rev. Charles E. Dunn

For the most part their life was fairly settled, with headquarters at Kadesh, a holy shrine on the southern border of the promised land, with an exceptional spring of water. Our lesson describes the departure of the Israelites from Mt. Sinai, where they had camped nearly a year, giving, in detail, the order of the twelve tribes in the route of march.

Then comes the charming episode of Moses' appeal to his father-in-law Hobab, elsewhere called Jethro, to act as guide. A member of the nomadic clan of Kenites or Midianites, he was thoroughly acquainted with the country through which the chosen people desired to pass. It is evident that he finally yielded to his son-in-law's urgent entreaty, despite his initial blunt refusal. That his services were not forgotten is indicated by Saul's counsel, many years later, to the Kenites to separate themselves from the enemy he was about to attack, because they, doubtless through Hobab, had been kind to his own folk. (See 1 Samuel 15:6.)

The Golden Text, "Come thou with us, and we will do thee good," the greeting of Moses to Hobab, is one of the Bible's gracious invitations. Hobab was a foreigner, but he is promised complete equality of treatment. "Come and be a pair of eyes for us," pleads Moses, to quote Moffatt's graphic translation, "and as the Eternal prospers us, so will we prosper you."

The Church of God might well make use of the Hobabs outside its fold capable of guiding its thinking into new areas of experiment. Let every household of faith welcome such with open arms in the generous affection of the Golden Text.

THE VOICE OF AUTHORITY

Success is always exciting; we never grow tired of asking what and how. What, then, were the principal elements in Jesus' power over men? How was it that the boy from a country village became the greatest leader?

Bruce Barton

First of all he had the voice and manner of the leader—the personal magnetism which begets loyalty and commands respect. The beginnings of it were present in him even as a boy. John felt them.

On the day when John looked up from the river where he was baptizing converts and saw Jesus standing on the bank, he drew back in protest. "I have need to be baptized of thee," he exclaimed, "and comest thou to me?" The lesser man recognized the greater instinctively. We speak of personal magnetism as though there were something mysterious about it—a magic quality bestowed on one in a thousand and denied to all the rest. This is not true. The essential element in personal magnetism is a consuming sincerity—an overwhelming faith in the importance of the work one has to do.

Most of us go through the world mentally divided against ourselves. We wonder whether we are in the right jobs, whether we are making the right investments, whether, after all, anything is as important as it seems to be. Our enemies are those of our own being and creation. Instinctively we wait for a commanding voice for one who shall say authoritatively, "I have the truth. This way lies happiness and salvation." There was in Jesus supremely that quality of conviction.

Even very successful people were moved by it. Jesus had been in Jerusalem only a day or two when there came a knock at his door at night. He opened it to find Nicodemus, one of the principal men of the city; a member of the Sanhedrin, a supreme court judge. One feels the dramatic quality of the meeting—the young, almost unknown, teacher and the great man, half curious, half convinced.

It would have been easy to make a mistake. Jesus might very naturally have expressed his sense of honor at the visit; have said: "I appreciate your coming, sir. You are an older man and successful. I am just starting on my work. I should like to have you advise me as to how I may best proceed. But there was no such note in the interview—no effort to make it easy for this notable visitor to become a convert. One catches his breath involuntarily at the audacity of the speech:

"Verily, verily, I say to you, Nicodemus, except you are born again you can not see the kingdom of Heaven." And a few moments later, "If I have not told you earthly things and you have not believed, how shall you believe if I tell you heavenly things?"

The famous visitor did not enroll as a disciple, was not invited to enroll; but he never forgot the impression made by the young man's amazing self-assurance. In a few weeks the crowds along the shores of the Sea of Galilee were to feel the same power.
