Some day, if Japan keeps up her present tactics, she is going to step on the wrong fellow's toe, and then the reaction will mash her nose and over her impudent face. No nation can go against the public opinion of the world and get away with it. If Japan doesn't believe that, maybe the gentleman at Doorn, or the Kaiser Wilhelm, could give her some valuable information on the subject. There can be no excuse for the aggressions upon Chinese territory and the slaughter of Chinese, by a military machine of Japan. She can put her action under any guise she chooses, and the stark, ugly facts persist in the minds of the people of the world.

One of the big problems before the State is the making of the homes of thousands of the citizens of North Carolina. They are about to be lost through tax foreclosures and mortgage foreclosures. Some of the many bills pending before the General Assembly should be enacted. It is a serious thing and should be a matter of great concern to the State itself for its citizens to lose their homes and be turned out in the world. It makes enemies of government of the very people upon whom the State must rely in times of stress. For bond holders to be late in getting their principal and interest is one thing, and for thousands of citizens of North Carolina to be homeless is an entirely different matter. Both would be evils, but of the latter is the far greater. The homes of North Carolina should be saved at all cost; and it is the duty of the General Assembly, before it adjourns, to do all that is within the power of the State to save these homes.

A PROHIBITION PLEBESOTE

Looks as though we are to have a real show down on this National Prohibition business, at last, and the effect should be salutary upon the country, after all these years of agitation. The people are to settle the matter with their own votes, entirely divorced from politics. The plan under which Congress proposes the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment calls for constitutional convention in the several States. The delegates to these conventions will be elected by the people, and each man and woman will know, when he votes, whether his candidate is for repeal or retention of the amendment. We shall have a real referendum, and every voter in America will have an opportunity to really express himself upon the prohibition question, without politics, economics, or anything else being injected into it to becloud the issue. That is as it should be. The people should be allowed to speak; and, when they have spoken, the issue should be regarded as settled.

All that remains now to be done is for the legislatures of the several states to set up the machinery for the election of the delegates and the holding of the conventions.

We are a long way yet from prohibition repeal. If thirteen States refuse to ratify the repeal of the amendment, then Prohibition remains in the Constitution. The dries have every advantage. They have only to carry thirteen of the forty-eight States, while the wets will have to capture thirty-six states before their repeal proposal can go through. The proposal to repeal also carries with it the protection of the States that wish to be dry from the imposition of liquor from the wet states.

TODAY and TOMORROW

and growing demand for a complete reorganization of the railroad systems of the United States are largely from just such an arrogant and selfish attitude on the part of railroad managements in almost every part of the country.
Radio . . . World-wide Report
We have got so accustomed to radio broadcasting that to most of us it hardly seems like a miracle. But I cannot escape the feeling that the world entered a new era on February 17th when the League of Nations broadcasted to the world its report refusing to recognize Japan's right in Manchuria.

STREET CARS AND MEN

SURELY no one will consider us lacking in reverence if we say that every one of the "principles of modern salesmanship" on which business men so much pride themselves, are brilliantly exemplified in Jesus' talk and work. The first of these and perhaps the most important is the necessity for "putting yourself in step with your prospect." A great sales manager used to illustrate it in this way:

"When you want to get aboard a street car which is already in motion, you don't run at it from right angles and try to make the platform in one wild leap," he would say. "If you do, you are likely to find yourself on the floor. No. You run along beside the car, increasing your pace until you are moving just as rapidly as it is moving and in the same direction. Then you step aboard easily, without danger or jolt."

"The minds of busy men are in motion," he would continue. "They are engaged with something very different from the thought you have to present. You can't jump directly at them and expect to make an effective landing. You must put yourself in the other man's place; try to imagine what he is thinking; let your first remark be in line with his thoughts; follow it by another with which you know he will easily agree."

"Thus, gradually, your two minds reach a point where they can join without conflict. You encourage him to say 'yes' and 'yes' and 'that's right' and 'I've noticed that myself,' until he says the final 'yes' which is your favorable decision."

Jesus taught all this without ever teaching it. Every one of his conversations, every contact between his mind and others, is worthy of the attentive study of any sales manager. Passing along the shores of a lake one day, he saw two of the men whom he wanted as disciples. Their minds were in motion; their hands were busy with their nets; their conversation was about conditions in the fishing trade, and the prospects of a good market for the day's catch. To have broken in on such thinking with the offer of employment as preachers of a new religion would have been to confuse them, and invite a certain rebuff. What was Jesus' approach?

"Come with me," he said, "and I will make you fishers of men." Fishers . . . that was a word they could understand . . . fishers of men . . . that was a new idea . . . what was he driving at . . . fishers of men . . . it sounded interesting . . . well, what is it, anyway? They listened. They were convinced. They said yes—and they went with Him.

4-H CLUB NEWS

Florida Wide Awake
Florida may be a place where a lot of people do nothing but play, but to about 2500 native boys and girls enrolled in 4-H clubs it's a very busy place. This is not a large number compared to the enrollment in most other states but it is a good showing for the agricultural rank of the state. Club work is being carried on in some over 30 counties, and many flattering records are being made by club members.

In spite of the general depression last year the enrollment of boys gained 20 per cent. Girls also enrolled in larger number. They believe and are proving that club projects actually help to combat hard times. It took these boys to show a lot of farmers how to grow corn. The 356 boys who grew an acre project last year harvested an average of 32 bushels per acre. This compares with the state average of 13 bushels.

While some people will remark that there is now a surplus of corn, they should consider that if a farmer can raise as much corn on half as much land as he usually puts to the crop he is ahead, especially if he gets the high yield at low cost. This the boys did, as they made use of the inexpensive method of growing cover crops to add organic matter to their thin soil, and bought very little fertilizer.

Forty-six boys grew peanuts and averaged 34 bushels per acre. Six harvested an average of 125 bushels of Irish potatoes per acre. The 115 who had a sweet potato project averaged 115 bushels per acre. In the northern part of the state the 66 who grew cotton as a project averaged 965 pounds of seed cotton per acre. Besides these crops, they are doing a lot of gardening, raising poultry, and considerable livestock. The boys in forestry last year set 144 acres to pines. And they had a lot of fun in their social and business meetings.

the world for anybody and everybody to pick up. It took ten hours to finish the entire report, but a copy of it was picked up by the New York Times and it was published in full on the following morning. With less than twenty-four hours every newspaper in the world was able to inform its readers that the combined nations of the world would oppose Japanese aggression in China.

It was the most impressive gesture the League of Nations has ever made. And my guess is that it will accomplish its purpose.
