Thank a wise beneficent Providence that you haven't got some of the things you wish you had.

Five different governments in France within a year. They, also, seem to be hard to please.

A hint of beauty, those new, rock steps leading from the new walk, down the hill to the high school.

California knows how to handle kidnapping and such. Lynching isn't pretty, but it's pretty effective as a stopper of crime, sometimes.

The only money row we hear hereabouts is the row that folks are raising in trying to get hold of some of it.

Amos is ready to give David a divorce, announces a headline. If we were David that would make it practically unanimous in the family.

"Raspberry Campaign" down in the county of Burke, would make one think that the 1928 election was in the offing.

Pity old Man Bryan can't be on the scene to enjoy the fun over this "sound money" argument. Maybe, in the bosom of Abraham, he is having a chuckle over it.

Maybe the reason the Governor ordered the next year's license tags placed on sale so early is that the paint is worn off the old ones so that they can't be read.

There are many things distasteful about lynching; but we'll bet that the next time somebody wants to stage a kidnapping, they won't pick out California.

Many people decry the making of Thanksgiving a Day of sports. Well, it may be, on the other hand, that the modern American feels more at home at the football field than he would at church.

North Carolina should watch closely the efforts of the United States to get Samuel Insull extradited out of Greece, and if they prove successful, we might try the same methods on Tennessee and Lake Lea.

We don't know how much money Al Smith stands to lose, by the fiscal policy of the administration; but we do know that he has already lost the bulk of his friends in the South, by his attacks on the President's New Deal.

Tough and cinched to get flowers from the casket of Texas Guinan, at the gate of the cemetery at Mount Pleasant, N. Y. And still there are some folks who say that we are a civilized people.

One trouble about all the agitation against lynching, horrible as lynching can be, sometimes, is that the criminals get the idea that the agitators are agitating in their interest and give them license to do as they please with the persons of other and better folks.

Al Smith prefers gold to boloney as dollars. Time was when heads and wampum passed for money in this country, and they were about as useful as gold. Makes no difference what they use as a medium of exchange, so long as it will buy useful merchandise, and we can get enough of it to buy the things we need and haven't.

The great basic trouble in this country was the concentration of the national wealth in the hands of the few, leaving little for the rest of us. That is your depression. The New Deal seeks a better deal for the many.

That, of course, necessarily means that the few will have less than they had, and there is where the kicks are coming from against the money policy of the administration.

Anybody ought to have known that if the new deal started, and the fellows who have been holding the big bonds were to continue drawing the same bonds, that the deal play would be turned out about the same. The same, then the fellows who have been drawing all the aces, kings and jacks began to get some of the second trays that the rest of us were getting. And trying to play the best and a winning game with the rest 12 or thirteen years.

With old man Borah, a political foe of Smith, and Father Coughlin, one of Al's catholic priests, both lambasting him for his attack on the administration, Al must think, by now that Roosevelt has plenty of supporters in the country, even if the man who three placed him in nomination for the presidency is playing the danger in the maelstrom.

A mob of two thousand persons. The whole of the American people, except the jealous few, are thankful that conditions have improved since last year, that the dark clouds that gathered last January and February, culminating in the storm that closed every bank in the United States, in March, are passing, that the sun is beginning to shine through the clouds, that the people can look forward to the future with hope and confidence. From every side comes news of increasing prosperity, of greater earning power of the people, with the cost of living not proportionately increased, of thousands going back to work. The New Deal will lead, no one seems to know exactly where, but it is already driving the wolf from the doors of many in our land. Despair has been turned to hope. And we are thankful.

BOLONEY AND WEED CROPS

Carl Goerch, in his State, states that the farmers in the tobacco belt are getting twice as much money for their crop, under the New Deal, this year, than they got last, and that for the first time in three years, business is booming in Eastern Carolina. The farmers down that way don't seem to care whether it is gold or "boloney" they are getting for their weed crop. It passes for money, buys the things they want, and have had to do without, for three years, pay taxes, and makes business hum, in a section where the wolf has been howling his big, bad, mournful tune over the well-nigh prostrated forms of business and agriculture. A fellow won't starve, anyway, as long as he can get enough boloney.
