Allison Again Heads Local Commerce Body

WEEK By WEEK

After three years of bloody warfare in the Chaco, Bolivia and Paraguay are reported as having agreed upon terms of armistice and arbitration. That is the way most modern wars end. Blood, fire, devastation, death, by wholesale, and then terms of peace that could as easily have been agreed upon before a shot was fired. That is the foolishness of fighting.

Mixed up in nearly every sensational crime that attracts nationwide interest, such as kidnappings, can be found at least one person who has been in prison and paroled. There must be something wrong with a system that turns criminals loose to do further depredations upon society, after they have been convicted and sentenced, and before the time specified in the judgment has been served. This was the case with the Weyerhaeuser boy.

China has surrendered to Japan's demands without firing a shot, and another huge slice of Chinese territory will pass to Japanese control. Japan has been swallowing up China in huge chunks, for some years. It sounds foolish, but China will be the winner, in the long run. She will absorb Japan as she has other conquering races, in the past, and a few centuries hence it will all be China again. The wisdom of untold centuries lies behind the Oriental eyes of the Chinese; and the doctrine of turning the other cheek isn't as foolish as the world believes it. The real danger of it all is not to China, but to the white nations of the Occident.

Frank O. Lowden, addressing the "grass roots" Republican convention, out in the bucolic west, took the position that the next campaign will be waged about the sanctity of the Constitution. If the Constitution had been allowed to remain as the founding fathers wrote it, and hadn't been changed by Mr. Lowden's party during the revolution consummated after the death of Lincoln, whom he canonizes, most of the material that causes political, economic and social unrest, would never have been in the document. It is the amendments put in the Constitution by the radicals of that day, that the Nine Old Men use to base opinions that bring anxiety and consternation. And, by the way, Lincoln opposed all such ideas as were embodied in those amendments, as well as the purposes for which they were enacted; and they could never have been adopted, as they are, had he lived and been able to hold in check the political forces that put them in the Constitution. As is usual with revolutionists and reformers, they were obsessed with a great love or a great hate, that blinded them to all else save that and the desire to see to their own political well-being, and knew not what they really did.
