

SYLVA

The biggest little city in the mountains bids the President and his party welcome to our town, our county
and our mountain country

Nestling at the foot of the great mountains, Sylva, with an altitude ranging from 2,000 to 4,000 feet, is a beautiful and attractive little city.

It gets water from the eternal springs high up on the Balsams.

It has many miles of paved streets.

Magnificent highways radiate in every direction.

Beautiful homes crown its hills and line its streets, splendid shops make it a trading center for much of Western North Carolina.

Manufacturing enterprises keep the people employed the year around.

It has fine schools---splendid churches.

It possesses a great citizenship.

It is a fair little city and a goodly one.
