

ONE YEAR IN ADVANCE IN THE COUNTY

Large Docket Looms In Criminal Court Here

Perhaps the longest criminal docket in the history of the county will face the Donald Phillips when he arrives in the May term of Jackson county superior court, on Monday morning the 17th. The long docket is a large measure to the change in the law governing public drunkenness making that offense a more serious one than it has been heretofore, and the final disposition of such cases by the justices of the peace, and placing them in the superior court for the entire docket, as a percentage of it will disclose, is composed of ninety percent of the cases which will cost Jackson county a great deal of money, and the costs charged against the account of the barkeepers, though Jackson county taxpayers will have to foot the bill.

The jury commission, R. U. Sutton, and H. H. Bryson, will draw the jury for the two weeks.

TODAY and TOMORROW

(By Frank Parker Stockbridge)
YELLOWJACK . . . still thrives. More American soldiers were killed in the Spanish War of 1818 by yellow fever in Cuba than by Spanish bullets. Dr. Walter Reed of the Surgeon General's office, seeking the cause of yellow fever, found the disease was carried by a particular species of mosquito. Cleaning up the breeding places of that mosquito freed the states and cities of our own South from the dreaded "yellowjack" and made it possible to build the Panama Canal.
The Rockefeller Foundation has spent six million dollars fighting yellowjack all over the world and the pest was believed to have been eradicated. Now, however, the "Aedes Aegypti" mosquito has been found in the Brazilian jungle, and new outbreaks of yellow fever are feared. Brazil is only four days by airplane from Miami. Public health officials are setting up quarantine precautions to keep the fever-bearing mosquito out of the United States.

No battle in mankind's war with Nature is ever finally won. The fight has to be kept up.

DIVORCE . . . liberalized. The British Parliament is considering, and seems likely to pass, a bill "liberalizing" the divorce laws of England, in spite of the opposition of the Established Church. At present there is but one ground for divorce in England, infidelity. The new law would grant divorce for cruelty, desertion, insanity or the sentence of either husband or wife to life imprisonment.

In America a strong movement is developing in the Episcopal church to forbid the remarriage in that church of any man or woman who has been divorced. Several states are taking steps to make divorce easier. Divorce laws vary from that of South Carolina, which forbids divorce on any grounds, to that of Nevada, where little more than the fact that the couple have got tired of each other is ground for divorce.

Early in colonial days Americans adopted the view that marriage is not a holy sacrament but a civil contract. Except where a church which holds the opposite view is a dominant political force, that is the rule almost everywhere. And in this country we have become very tolerant of divorce, especially where there are no children's interests are involved.

FLYING . . . bigger planes. Six large airplanes, bigger than anything yet constructed, are being built for the new trans-Atlantic air service. They are half again as large as the "clippers" now flying across the Pacific, will have berths for 72 passengers and a crew of eight, and can carry 5,000 pounds of freight besides the passenger load.

Flying at 200 miles an hour, these new Atlantic Clippers will be able to cross to Europe in 15 hours. In Summer they can make the entire flight between dawn and dark. Passengers can eat an early breakfast in America and a late dinner the same day in England. They will be powered with four 15,000-horse-power engines and carry fuel for a 5,000 mile flight. Only the wildest dreams of romancers like Jules Verne ever pictured a marvel like this.

The next big advance in flying will be high-speed world girdling planes flying in the stratosphere at 500 miles an hour. One is already being built. Aviation is still in its infancy.

TAXES . . . new sources. When Michael Faraday showed his new invention of the first electric dynamo to Mr. Gladstone, Queen Victoria's finance minister, the statesman asked what good it was. "Some day you will be able to tax it," replied the inventor. He was right. Every new invention when it gets into commercial use becomes a new source of tax revenue.

In England all the cost of broadcasting is paid for out of an annual tax on every receiving set. In this country every receiving set pays a manufacturer's tax which is included in the price we pay for it. Now it is proposed to tax broadcasting stations, on the theory that they should pay for the privilege of using the radio "channels" through the air. The more powerful the station, the higher the tax.

Somebody has to pay every new tax. Sooner or later a way is always found to make the ultimate consumer

MCKEE ASSUMES HIGHWAY OFFICE

E. L. McKee, Sylva industrialist, became a member of the State Highway and Public Works Commission, when he, together with Frank Durlap, chairman, and the other new commissioners, took the oath of office, in Raleigh, last Saturday.

Another meeting of the Commission will be convened on Tuesday of next week, at which time the commission will divide the State into Highway Districts, as provided by the act of the General Assembly. Then members of the commission will make an intensive study of the State's highway problems.

Governor Hoey, in addressing his newly appointed commission, expressed himself as being greatly interested in the secondary, or farm-to-market roads of the State.

His statement follows: "I am delighted to have you associated with me in this capacity," said the Governor. "I know changes will come along but I would advise that you not start in by making changes in the personnel. I think these ought to wait until you study your jobs and contact the people."

"I would advise you not to begin by making wholesale changes as that might tend to affect the morale of the organization and you know some people get the jitters when they don't know what is going to happen."

"When, after study you find that changes are needed, you should make them, but I think first you should get acquainted with your job."

"And your job is a big one. I want you to do a fine job building roads for North Carolina. I am primarily interested in the secondary roads. I expect you to get over your districts and tell your people that you haven't much money for construction, and I know you will undertake to seek out and work out your problems in an efficient manner and for the best interest of the State."

The proposed tax on broadcasting would eventually be included in the price of products advertised over the radio.

RELIGION . . . and reforms. I see about me increasing interest in religion by all sorts and conditions of men. Every far has been followed by a depression, and every period of recovery has been marked by a religious revival. The present renewed interest in religion is different, however. Dean Shailer Matthews of the Chicago University Divinity School calls it "jazz orthodoxy."

The heart of religious teaching and preaching in the past has been the appeal to the individual, to bring his own life and conduct into line with the commandments of God. In this age of collectivism, religion is dealing more with broad social problems, such

Democrats Carry Town By Large Majority Tuesday

Congress To Cut Appropriations Bill

Washington, May 4—The President has gone fishing in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico. He is making the trip as a gesture of friendship toward Jesse Jones, the six-foot-six Texas newspaper publisher, banker and capitalist who is the head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Mr. Jones, who was not a New Deal appointee, but a hold-over from the Hoover administration, is nevertheless one of the most powerful political figures in Washington. He does not play politics in his job, but he is one of the group of Texans, headed by Vice-President Garner, who have been able to get about what they wanted through the last two Congresses, or if they could not get just what they wanted, at least have usually been able to prevent others from getting what the Texans did not want them to have.

The Texans' major worry concerns the future of the Democratic party especially that great and dominant segment of it which is commonly referred to as the "Solid South". It is in this sector of the party that the doctrine of State rights is most deeply ingrained. Numerous recent events have alarmed Southern Democrats, anxious to preserve the rights of the individual states, and also to maintain political control in the hands of white men. On this latter point, the feeling grows that the Democrats of the North do not appreciate the situation in the South, which was expressed even on the official ballots in Alabama at the last election, where the Democratic column was headed with the words "White Supremacy." The pressure behind the anti-lynching bill, which the South, not because the South condemns lynch law, but because it would give the Federal government power to interfere in matters which southern statesmen hold are purely state affairs. The South feels that it has worked out a sound solution of the Negro problem, and resents the effort to tie the Negro vote to the Democratic party, which was made in the North in the last Presidential campaign. It also looks with suspicion upon programs of rural resettlement and tenant farmer relief which do not discriminate between whites and Negroes.

Fundamentally, the fear of Federal interference in this and other problems which they regard as solely the affairs of the individual states, is back of the Southern Democratic opposition to the President's Supreme Court plan. They do not want to see the Court brought under the domination of any Administration at Washington, or committed to indefinite extension of Federal power.

That all of these worries are combining to stiffen resistance to much of the New Deal program, by those who foresee a split in the Democratic party as a possible result, is admitted by most of the leaders in both Senate and House. The Republican minority is taking no part in the discussion except to throw a little fuel on the fire from time to time. But the net result, as has been pointed out before in these dispatches, is to stiffen Congressional resistance to much of the Administration program, and the readjustment by Congress of any of its rights and prerogatives which it surrendered during Mr. Roosevelt's first term.

For the first time in years, Congress appears to be taking seriously the idea of economizing. It is too early to predict, but it seems probable that appropriations will be kept down to or below the Administration's proposals. Already the cutting of departmental expenses has turned hundreds of Government employees out of their jobs. The rumor here is that Jesse Jones's R. F. C. is about to dismiss a thousand or more. The hardest fight on the economy front will probably be over the appropriations for relief. The President has recommended a billion and a half. Congress so far seems about equally divided between those who would cut this to a billion and those who want to make it two billion. Nobody knows what the real need is. States and mayors are putting on pressure to keep relief funds flowing into their communities. The pressure is also growing for an actual count of the unemployed, to provide a set of facts which may be used as a basis for further relief appropriations. It has just come to light that the De-
