SPRING IS HERE!

Spring is here! Spring is here! Call the birds from all the trees; Little child, dry your tears In the soft, spring breeze. For it is the glad spring time, And the bluebirds' hour for rhyme.

Spring is here! Spring is here! All the birds are glad. Everyone should be cheery And none should be sad. The lovely spring is here, Won't you help us spread good cheer!

All the birds are singing "Spread our good cheer!" All our voices ringing "Spring is here! Spring is here!" DORTHA HENNESSEE

It sounds contradictory, but a primary is secondary in election this year

For once we find ourselves in agreement with Henry Ford. He says that the nation is all right.

The world is awake. The spring of an even year of the calendar has arrived. Farming, gardening, fishing, baseball, soft-ball, and politics have put the folks busy.

A scientist tells us that the oracle of Delphi was drunk on soda pop. There are those who would have given a great deal, a few years ago, to know how he managed a jag that way.

Mr. Justice Connor passed to his reward. Governor Hoy appointed Attorney General A. A. F. Sewell to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court bench, and promoted assisted Attorney General McMullen to the place vacated by his chief.

Summer school is on at Cullowhee, or rather the special six weeks term for teachers, and all this part of Jackson county is full of folks attending the college, while many are driving daily from Haywood, Macon and Swain. Our college appears to have really arrived as a State institution, serving the whole State. It needs more buildings, more equipment, more facilities.

B. C. Grindstaff

For a quarter of a century or more B. C. Grindstaff was one of the leading and most influential citizens of Sylva and Jackson county. A man of generous disposition, Mr. Grindstaff gave liberally of his time and his money to promote educational, religious and civic causes here. He had the distinction of being, perhaps, America's leading authority on mica, and as such his business carried him hither and yon about the country, where he made friends, and at the time retained his old ones.

He was a valuable man in Western North Carolina, and will be greatly missed.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, April 27 (Autocaster) — Opinions differ, in and out of Congress, as to the probable efficacy of President Roosevelt's new recovery program, as set forth in his message to Congress and his "fireside chat" over the radio the same night. There is no material difference of opinion, however, on some related points. Much satisfaction is expressed here over the fact that the Administration now clearly recognizes that the nation is in a serious depression; and even the President's most bitter opponents are gratified at the temperate tone of his written message and of his radio talk.

The new program advocated by the President is threefold. It provides for the continuance of relief measures, the expansion of bank credits and means of providing new work in which a large variety of industries will share. Coupled with the recent authorization to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend up to a billion and a half more to business of all kinds, with fewer restrictive conditions than in the past, it is the conviction in Administration circles that the President's new plan will do the trick, stem the tide of depression and start the country off again toward the avowed goal of 80 billion dollars of annual income.

Congress is Caged

President include another billion and a quarter for the W. P. A., fifty million more for the C. C. C., seventy five millions for the National Youth Administration and 175 millions additional for the Farm Security Administration. The inclination of Congress is to go along with the President on this part of his program, and on that part of it calling for great expenditures for public works, provided Congress can have a say as to how and where these expenditures are to be made. Gratiated as Congress is that the President in this case did not attempt to issue a peremptory order for the legislation he desires, the boys or Capitol Hill are inclined to be very cagey about giving Mr. Roosevelt another blank check. Much of the recent rebellion in Congress against the Administration has been due to the discovery that when they have voted a lump sum to be used at the President's discretion they were putting a weapon into the hands of the Executive which could be used effectively to discipline the Legislative branch of government.

Nothing has been more bitterly resented by the general run of Congressmen and Senators than the spectacle of Governors and Mayors lining up at the White House to beg for allotments of public works funds, instead of coming to the Capitol to beg for favors. The traditional prerogative of Congress has been to control the "pork-barrel," and the most valuable political asset of a Congressman has been his ability to get a good-sized slice of Federal funds expended in his home district.

Fight for Prestige
That is why they are scrutinizing very closely the President's proposals that they appropriate another 450 millions for the Public Works Administration, 37 millions for flood control work, 25 millions for public buildings, Treasury loans of 300 millions to the Housing Administration and a billion public works loans to states and their political subdivisions. They want to have the say as to what states and subdivisions, including Congressional districts, these huge sums are to be spent in, rather than to hand over lump sums which might, conceivably, be used to gain more credit for the Executive and to discredit members of the Legislative branch who have opposed any part of the Executive's program.

Therefore there is a strong chance that these new recovery appropriations will not be voted without being "ear-marked" for specific purposes in specific localities, thus reasserting again the independence of Congress.

That is still the real issue. Congress having found that a strong body of public opinion is back of it in refusing any longer to take orders from the White House without protest, is inclined to maintain and strengthen its position of independence. It wants to go along with the President in every feasible plan for economic recovery and the general welfare, but it is more insistent than for years in forming its own judgments on whether a particular program will work or not.

Letter Stirs Trouble
The tax bill is a case in point. The Senate passed a bill which, in its judgment, removed some of the major obstacles in the way of business recovery, namely the undistributed surplus tax and the excessive capital gains tax. The House had modified those to some extent but had retained their principle in the tax bill which it passed. A conference committee was engaged in trying to reconcile the differences and agree upon a compromise, when Mr. Roosevelt took a hand with a letter requesting that the House provisions on those points be retained. The Senate conferees were insistent upon their position, and considerable resentment of Executive interference in a purely Legislative matter is being shown by members of both houses.

What may be done about the President's recommendation for a wage-and-hour bill remains to be seen. The House committee has reported a bill which aims toward the eventual establishment of a forty-hour week with a minimum wage of forty cents an hour by statute. Best opinion here is that it will not be passed at this session. On the rest of the President's new proposals, such as removing the exemptions from income taxes on State and Federal salaries, eliminating the tax exemption provision from all future bond-issues, and considering monopolistic practices in business, there is equal doubt that anything will be done by this Congress.
