If Hitler won't behave, England is willing to take a Pole to him.

The readiness of England, France and Poland, appears to have taken the hit out of Hitler.

An exchange announced the opening of a private "grammar" school They should also include spelling in the curriculum.

Spider over at Emma is said to have woven the word "War" into its web; but how would a spider know any more about the outcome of the crisis than the rest of us.

This paper dislikes Hitler and most of his works; but we would feel more sympathy for Poland in the present crisis that threatens her, if she had not been one of the small dogs barking at the heels of beset Checzoslavokia when that unhappy country was beleagured by the German hound, scarcely a year ago, hoping to get a small slice of the meat after the kill.

The signing of a non-aggression treaty between Soviet Russia and Nazi Germany is as incongruous as the story that was going the rounds, a few years back, about the baseball game that was to be played between the Ku Klux Klan and the Knights of Columbus for the benefit of the Jewish Relief, with a Negro Umpire calling the game.

The Russo-German treaty has at least brought the peoples of the Democratic countries nearer together and made them more loyal to their governments, has brought the Democratic governments closer together, has upset the entire government and policy of Japan, practically alienated Spain from the axis, and driven a wedge into the axis itself, for the Italian people have no stomach for an ailiance with the Red Russian.

Jesse E. Rogers

In the death of J. E. Rogers, Jackson county lost one of her most honored and useful citizens. A man with a head full of common sense, a profound philosophy, and an eye single to the good of his community, county, State and country, Mr. Rogers played no small part in making Jackson county. He had firm convictions and the courage to stand by them. He made his impress upon the county as a private citizen and as an official, on the Board of Education.

Sensibilities Left

There was a near riot in Raleigh, the other day, over the fate of a mongrel pup. Showing that people have sensibilities left, even in this topsyturvy world beset with fears and hates.

It is hard to get the real facts from newspaper reports; but according to them, a plain-clothes policeman called a puppy to him, and when the pup, cringing and wagging his his tail, got near enough, th cificer grabbed him by the collar beat him to death with a blackjack and left him lying in the gutter on Fayetteville Street. This was in the midst of the shopping hour, and a crowd quickly gathered, threatening the officer, who hastily retreated. Women screamed, one suffered a serious heart attack, others fainted and cursed. As the news spread the shops were emptied of customers and clerks as well. The angry crowd staged a near riot, and one State College athlete offered to whip all the policemen in town, two at a time. Telephone calls were coming in to Chamber of Commerce and city officials, demanding the punishment of the offending officer, and women from nearby towns telephoned the officers that unless summary punishment was immediately forthcoming, they would withdraw all trade from

Raleigh shops. The officer, in his own behalf, told superiors that he had been sent to capture the dog, and that when he took hold, the animal tried to bite him, forcing him to strike in self-defense. However, that may be, the point in the story as we see it, is the North Carolina people, take them by and large, are people with humane and grel pup.

Agreement Without

The development in world affairs at has set the nations on their ears, the announcement of non-aggreson agreement between Soviet Rus-3 and Nazi Germany.

For months the French and Brith have led the world to believe that he negotiations going on in the Rusian capital would soon lead to a reaty wherehy the Soviet Union ould become a powerful member of ne Democrat't league to enforce Meantime Russian and Japan have een waging a small-time warfare iong the border in Asia. Russia has been backing up the Chinese nationlists with munitions and planes; and fapan has generally been considered s a member of the Berlin-Romelokyo axis, opposing England, France nd Russia, with an eye ever on america as a potential opponent of er imperalistic and expansionist lans in the Orient.

Russia and Germany have been irst came to power by leading German opposition to Russia and Comnunism, and it is upon such opposition that his party is largely based. The Spanish civil war, recently closed, was really a war waged between Russia as an ally of the Spanish comnunists on the one side and Germany and Italy on the other.

Now, in the face of the impending crisis over Danzig and the Polish corridor, with the King of the Belgiums calling a conference of the smaller European powers to meet and attempt to avert the disaster of war, there unexpectedly comes the announcement of the Russian-German treaty. It may mean nothing at all, and it may be the deciding factor that will give the totalitarianists the upper hand in the beset world, with the democracies standing helplessly by as their world crumbles before their eyes and the new anti-Christ ascends the throne.

There is a great deal to be taken into consideration. Japan has obviously been playing the Italio-German game in the Orient, thereby hoping to carry out the nefarious designs of her military expansionists: And the forces of which she is most afraid are Russia, first, then England, then America. She counted heavily upon the Italians and the Germans to keep England and France busy with European affairs, and Russia sufficiently on guard to be afraid to engage her, while Americans debated over the policy of isolation.

The Russian-German treaty leaves Japan decidedly out on a limb, as it leaves Russia free to oppose Japan in any way she sees fit, and the Japanese militarists evince keen disappointment over the eventuality.

On the other hand, it helps Japan in that it of necessity forces England to keep more of her sea and land power close home, thus relieving the British pressure on the Nipponese.

It shifts a much heavier burden upon England and France, if they hope to oppose Germany in European expansion; a burden which there is grave doubt of their ability to carry, if they can't count on some assistance from the Soviets.

But, can Germany and Russia trust each other? It is true that they are ooth totalitarian states, and the treaty is somewhat in the nature of a wedling of totalitarianism. But, the one epresents Communism and the othr National Socialism, two distinc: and antagonistic brands of totalitar-

Both nations are notorious for gong back upon their pledged word vhenever it suits the ambitions of their leaders. Nobody outside of dermany would put the slightest faith in any treaty to which Hitler or Stalin would put his name. Both of them have gone back on their word and their friends, both inside and outside their own countries on so many occasions, that the pledged word of either is not worth the paper ipon which it is written.

Hitler knows all this about Stalin and Stalin knows it about Hitler. So won't the treaty lead to intensification of spying one upon the other to such an extent that the treaty will break down of its own accord?

It suits these two to agree to a treaty today. Perhaps, next weel ae or the other will find it expedien to throw in with somebody else.

If the treaty of totalitarianism results in the democracies being shunted aside while the dictatorships gob ble up whatever they desire, it i reasonable to suppose that sooner or later this unnatural alliance wil break up, and the Communists and National Socialists will again be a each other's throat.

Hay Should Be Cut At "Just Right Time"

No phase of farming requires better timing than the cutting of hay, Mrs. Harry Buchanan, Miss Maymo says John A. Arey, dairy specialist Long, Mrs. O'Dell Bankhead, Mrs. of the State College Extension Ser- Marcellus Buchanan, Jr., Mrs. J. F. vice. Hay is one of the best and most Freeze, Mrs. Louis Hair, and Mrs. economical feeds for dairy cows, but Mary C. w n. much of the hay being fed in North Carolina is of low quality, and has a correspondingly low nutritive value, J. R. Warren, Balsam,

The proper time to cut hay crops is when the greatest quantity of digestible nutrients can be obtained. With most crops, the percentage of leafiness and protein content are highest soon after the plant begins to bloom. A little later the protein moves toward the seed, the stems become woody, and the leaves next to the ground begin to fall, the specialist explained.

The best time to cut alfalfa is when the crop is from one-tenth to onefourth in bloom; lespedeza, when the crop is about one-half in bloom; soybeans, when the pods are wellraditional enemies. In fact Hitler formed and the seed are about onehalf developed cowpeas, when the first pods begn to yellow; and small grain crops such as wheat, barley, and oats, when in late bloom or the early milk stage.

The grasses, such as timothy, redtep, and orchard grass, should be cut in the early bloom stage. The blooming period of these grasses is short and a few days delay in cutting may result in a coarse, stemmy, unpalatable hay.

Arey said that weeds and other oreign materials is usually the result a poor stand of hay crops. Heavy seeding, therefore, is one of the first ssentials in producing good hay. Thin stands promote a growth of a coarse stemmed hay in which there is a high percentage of waste when it is fed.
