no means of communication. At Webster, the home of Charles Roper, James Bumgarner and Fred McConnell and Wm. Wooten were carried away, no casualties there. The Riverside Tourist Camp, property of J. M Leatherwood, was hit hard, and parts of buildings, believed to be Mr. Leatherwood's cabins, Were seen floating down the river at Dillsboro. The plants of the Dillsboro and Sylva Electric Light Company and of the Dillsboro Ice Company were demolish ed by the flood; but there was but slight interruption in the light and power service in Sylva. The power switch from the Nantahala Power Company's lines Was thrown, and the service of the Dillsboro and Sylva people was continued, from that source,

ter from Congressman Zebulon

Weaver to Mr. Stephen Early.

Secretary to President Roosevelt, is given:

"When the establishment of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park was first undertaken, his (Mr. Tompkins') was the only newspaper which ardent ly supported it".

Congressman Weaver, then as now the Representative of this District in Congress, was interest ed in the movement, and one of the strongest supporters of it. Mr. Weaver was personally acquainted with the Smoky Mountains as few men were or are. He had the vision to see what the preservation of the primeval forests as a National Park would mean to the people, and to Western North Carolina. Regardless of the interests that were inimical to the ideal, Mr. Weaver stuck to his guns. He introduced the bill for the establishment of the Park, and he worked for it in season and out, until it was enacted into law.

Horace Kepnart, by his books whether there was any loss of had gotten the ear of a great many people of America. He kept the people of the Nation interested.

The Jackson County Journal kept presenting the idea to the people of Western North Carobut it is believed that there were lina. At last it looked as if there really was a chance for the dream to come true.

Then certain big interests in Western North Carolina, from selfish standpoint, which has long since been forgotten, began a campaign of counter-propaganda. Upon this they spent a large amount of money for newspaper advertising, and otherwise. Influential individuals bestirred themselves in opposition, but the seed had been too well sowed. The people of the counties of the State responded to a call for voluntary contributions to pay The sylva smoky Mountain see voted money for the land tent of the damage there is unknown, though it must have been severe.

778 Enroll in Sylva Schools On Opening Day of New Term

Additional Increase Is Expected For First Several Days

The enrollment for the Sylva schools on the first day of the fall term, yesterday, totaled 778 pupils. Of this number 376 are in the high school, and 402 in the elementary and primary departments.

School officials point out that while this is a high enrollment, they expect an increase by reason of additional students entering the schools for the next several days.

The High School has been accredited for some time; and the elementary school is again on the accredited list in the state,

Masonic Gold Medal

Mr. M. Buchenan, Sr., one of Sviva's oldest and most gromi-nent ettreps, was presented a gold medal for 50 years of membership and service to the Masonic order, at the regular meeting of the Lodge, on Monday night. The presentation was made by C. A. Hoyle, District Deputy Grand Master.

Mr. Buchanan was made a Mason at Unaka Lodge, at Webster. When the Lodge was organized at Sylva, he was a charter member; and, when Unaka Lodge was consolidated with Sylva Lodge, and moved to Sylva, Mr. Buchanan again became a member of the Lodge in which he was raised
