1. In a recent interview during a survey to discover what housewives think of Southern Twin Pack Bread, the following scene took place:

2. Interviewer: How do you do, madam. I'm making a survey and would like to find out what you think of Southern Twin Pack Bread.

Housewife: I prefer it to any other kind because each half loaf is separately wrapped and then both halves are wrapped again. Two wrappers always keep bread fresher than one.

Housewife: Yes—it saves me money because it stays fresh longer. I never have any stale bread to throw away.

4. Yes, housewives, you too can end stale bread waste by buying Southern Twin Pack Bread. This bread saves you money, for while you use one half, the other half remains sealed and as fresh as when it came from the oven.
