Howard R. Garriss, Extension plant pathologist of N. C. State College, reports that a large number of samples of diseased pecans have been sent to his office this fall, and they continue to come in every few days.

In answer to these requests for diagnosis of the trouble, and for recommendations for control of the disease, Garriss said: "In nearly every case the samples received were found to have the pecan scab disease. It is too late to correct this trouble in the current crop of nuts. But there are several ways to curtail or prevent damage to future crops." The Extension specialist said that certain varieties of pecans are resistant to the scab, while others are susceptible to attack.

Immune and resistant varieties include: Mobile, Alley, Moore, Nelson, Stuart, Fratches, Moneymaker, Techie, Russel and Success. Among the varieties susceptible to scab are: San Saba, Georgia, Delmas, Van Demon, Schley, Pabst, and Bolton.

THE soldier speaks: the trenches were wet and muddy. The battlefield was gory. I killed—I died, that our Democracy might live.

THE marine recalls: we patrolled the seas. Submarines imperilled our lives. But we got America's forces across—to fight for liberty.

THE sailor says: our ships were gray ghosts in coats of camouflage. Some of us went down in the deep, happy to sacrifice our lives—that all that is good might live on.

LIBERTY SHALL BE THE VICTOR!

1941 that this year might mark another Armistice: a just peace, wherein the spirit of democracy once again pervades all nations! In commemoration of that first Armistice Day, 1918, man can make no more fervent prayer!

All our energies, hopes and productivity must be coordinated with just one goal: ultimate liberation of peoples enslaved: a final peace, whatever the way and the sacrifice necessary to achieve it!

PEACE!

How Joyous

Was That Word - Twenty-three Years Ago!

WE honor the defenders of America, then and now.

MAY our people ever continue to enjoy the blessings of freedom for which those young men of 23 years ago fought and which those of today prepare to defend and perpetuate.
