BAGGING

A cotton bagging program for 1942, providing for the manufacture of up to four million "patterns," or bale coverings, has been announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The Red Cross Gypper

Editor Jackson County Journal: I would like to say a few words in regard to the scrap metal program.

We had a community meeting with the county agent and organized the campaign. We were told to collect all kinds of metal, tin, tires, tubes, rags, paper, etc., and it would be bought and paid for by a licensed dealer and was not asking to donate, as in the case of aluminum.

I was selected as committeeman to work a community and I put in four or five days of free time with the people advising them to get all the junk they could find and they would be paid for it. The boys went to work like beavers in order to earn themselves some money and also to help the government, as they were told how badly the government needed it.

After they had gathered about all they could find, some one got the idea of giving it to the Red Cross, which was all right, and a very worthwhile cause; but this was the first time some of these boys had ever had the opportunity to earn any money, and some of them certainly do need it.

I will give here a little outline of the kind of people who collected this material and their circumstances. There were two boys whose father and mother are dead, who worked all their time out of school for two weeks. And there are two more boys who have no father or mother, who collected a pile and moved it two miles to the highway. And there is a boy whose father is dead teamed up with two other boys and collected 2800 pounds.

And there was another boy whose father is dead teamed with a neighbor boy, collected a nice pile. And one boy whose father has been on relief and has a large family and small children. This boy carried some of this material five miles.

Now here is where the gypping comes in. Mr. Lackey says he made a deal with a junk dealer to handle all the junk including tin, rags, paper, etc., at 40c per hundred. We were notified the truck would be along on Monday to pick up this material. So I waited all day for the truck to come and no truck came. So I went to see said junk dealer on Tuesday and they agreed to come on Thursday and get the stuff. I told them that part of it was not for the Red Cross, and I would go with them and help them get it all out; but instead, they came on Wednesday when there was no one to look after it, picked out all of the iron, steel, aluminum, copper and brass, and now they refuse to handle the other materials. Said dealer started to load one pile of junk and owners were at school and saw him and went out to bargain with him, and he tried to buy their pile for $1.00; but he finally came up to $3.00, so they went to see their father, and said dealer offered him $4.00, and said he did not have over 800 pounds. But he would not let him have it, so he drove off without it. So I waited all day Thursday and he did not come; but came Friday, and got the pile he said had 800 pounds, after much dickering, and took it and weighed it, and it weighed 2800 pounds. (Good judgment for an experienced junk man). He also held back the price of 600 pounds for haul bill. There is quite a difference between $1.00 and $11.20 for a licensed dealer. I call that defrauding the people, the Red Cross and the government, as they have left material the government needs.

Shall a licensed dealer be allowed to hold up the war effort like this and make 1100 percent profit above what he should get? C. PRICE DILARD
