HOME HAPPENINGS.

—Mercury at 66°.

—Where, oh, where is our snow?

—Mr. Armington and son arrived on Thursday night.

—We expect to see some long needed public improvements in our village before long.

—See the advertisement of "Books for the million" for sale by S. P. Seawell, Bensalem, N. C.

—G. A. Wildes and Willie Wildes, of Belmont, N. H., were in town this week stopping at Vermont Cottage.

—No better magazine for the family can be had than Lippincott's. See the advertisement on this page.

—The popular game of rabbit is about to be revived at the Prospect House.

—C. B. Grout has moved into Dr. Boynton's cottage where he will remain until his new house is completed.

—Mr. Ford, a prominent lawyer of Saratoga county, N. Y., has been stopping at the Prospect House for several days past.

—L. A. Young and family have arrived from Lisbon, N. H. He is occupying his cottage on New Hampshire Avenue.

—Greetings from the "Mayor of Southern Pines" were telegraphed to the L. S. O. of New Haven, Ct., on Thursday.

—Mr. E. Newton of Lisbon, N. H., is one of our latest arrivals. He says he doesn't mind having the mercury at 35° or 40° below 0, but likes a change once in a while.

—Mr. B. W. Couch, of Concord, N. H., who spent a few days here last June has returned to spend the winter. He is troubled with a bronchial difficulty which he expects to recover from in this delightful climate.

—Below is the record of temperature for the past week:—

	10 a. m.	4 p. m.
Jan. 8	34°	34°
" 9	32	40
" 10	40	44
" 11	30	42
" 12	40	50
" 13	48	58
" 14	60	66

—We are very happy to chronicle the first marriage in Southern Pines. Mrs. Abbie Leonard and her daughter Mrs. W. S. Aldridge, of Lisbon, N. H., arrived on Thursday. On Friday Esquire Shaw, while passing the cottage where Mr. S. T. Moffett now resides, was invited to enter. He did so, and when he came out Mrs Leonard was no more. We congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Moffett and wish them much happiness.

—Dr. Mason Adams died on Wednesday morning, Jan. 12th. His remains were taken to Washington, D. C., for interment. Though realizing how bare a possibility there was of his recovery he was brave and hopeful to the end.

—Our readers should not overlook the advertisement of Mrs. Frank Leslie which appears in this paper. The proprietor of this well-known and enterprising publishing house offers a splendid statuette of Bartholdi's "Liberty," free of charge, to every subscriber to the Illustrated Newspaper or the Popular Monthly, or for two subscriptions to the Sunday Magazine. Each of these publications have hosts of old readers and friends in all parts of the country, who do not need to be told that they are among the best issued. The statuette is an exact facsimile of the colossal figure in New York Harbor, of the same material, and is an exceedingly pretty and effective parlor or mantel ornament—"Not for a day, but all time". Mrs. Leslie, with her usual enterprise, has secured absolute control, for premium purposes, of the statuette, and it will be offered by no other publisher. The Frank Leslie Publications are all of a high order of excellence, and enjoy well-deserved popularity.

NORTH CAROLINA INSANE ASYLUM.

Is it not characteristic of us as a people that we dwell much upon our rights, and less upon our duties? Our predecessors did well when they established the North Carolina Insane Asylum, and the most of them have passed away and sleep in honored graves. Another forward step, after repeated appeals, was taken when the Western North Carolina Institution was created. Objections were raised to both in their day, but they have passed away, and whose voice is heard to-day, except in support of these great citadels of humanity?

Is anything to be saved on the score of economy by declining to provide for the insane? It is the lowest of motives to appeal to, in an enlightened breast, but surely even such a reason has no foundation in fact. The building of accommodations does not call the lunatic into existence. He is already here—he must be fed, often now upon most expensive, yet improper diet; he must be clothed, even if the daily or weekly destruction of his garments, alike with other objects within his reach, renders the task a never ending drain and a hopeless effort after decency and comfort; he must have some attendance, even if it result in the utter disorganization of the family, and the conversion by degrees of its happy wage-workers, as producers, into poverty stricken consumers, often a burden upon neighbors and friends, and not unoften reduced to the desperate level of the victim himself.

North Carolina is able to undertake this holy task. She is far richer than when she began the Western Asylum, and she has a much larger population to share the burden and expense of this duty. Her personal property has doubled since that day, her State debt has been materially lightened, her credit has immensely improved, until it has as proud a position as she could desire; new population and capital flow now in a steady and gradual stream into her borders, while immigration to other States has almost ceased.

After careful consideration of this subject, I can at present see no plan of increasing the accommodations for the insane in the State which more commends itself for its adaption in all respects, to our needs, than that of enlarging this institution by the extension of its wings, with additions at each extremity, running to the rear, so as to admit of more ready communication with the central buildings of the present edifice.—Extracts from Dr. Grissom's Report.
