SETTLED BY THE DIGTIONARY Miss Pipkins Had to Consult It Before She Yielded to Augustus Hopper's Suit.

Augustus Hopper laid his heart at the feet of the wealthy, though uneducated, Miss Pipkins, and pleaded his passion with a wealth of oratory worthy of a cabinet minister or a racecourse tipcter.

"My queen! my evening star!" he oried, striking an attitude of suppli- gobbling another railroad. cation. "Will you be mine? For months I have worshiped you with lence as long as she could and then ep devotion. I have loved you better than life. I have treasured every syllable that has fallen from matically. your ruby lips. Now I can remain silent no longer, and I declare my passion in the earnest hope that my ardent affection meets with reciprocity and ratification. What is your answer, adored one?"

"One moment, Mr. Hopper," replied Miss Pipkins, as she crossed over to the bookshelf; "first let me consult my oracle."

And she reached down the dictionary and looked up the meaning of "reciprocity" and "ratification."

"'Gustus, I am yours!" she declared a moment later, snuggling to his third waistcoat button.

What Happened I hen

Jones picked up his paper at about the third call from Mrs. Jones, rose rather reluctantly from his easy chair, 10-10-4t and going into the dining room sat down at the table where dinner was already waiting. Mrs. Jones eyed him hopefully as she ladled out the soup, but he said nothing.

It had been rather a stressful day down at the office and he felt like nothing so much as simply being quiet, saying nothing to any one and having no one to say anything to bim. Consequently he silently propped the evening paper against the sugar bowl and continued reading the column of Wall street gossip about Harriman

Mrs. Jones stood the strain of siburst forth desperately: "Well, what's new down town?"

"Nothing much," said Jones auto-

"Have a good day down at the office?" "Oh, about as usual," answered

"Has Brown been giving you any more trouble?"

"Nope," he grunted shortly.

"How does your new stenographer get on?" There was no hidden trap in this question, no secret jealousy concealed. Jones's new stenographer was an elderly maiden who wore spectacles and goloshes and Mrs. Jones's mind was perfectly serene regarding her. "Aw ri'," responded Jones between mouthfuls. "I believe you'll like her much better than you did that pert girl you had," said Mrs. Jones. "She seems sensible and respectful—quite different from that fluffy-haired thing who always looked at me so critically whenever I came down to the office.

I fairly detested her, the little ninny!" Mr. Jones stirred uneasily, but made no reply, and after a pause Mrs. Jones said: "How much does that clerk she

${ t PEABODY}$ ACADEMY

Session of 1912-1913

要要用のこととというというというとうことのとのとのとの意思を

The Peabody Academy will open its doors for the beginning of the school year Tuesday morning, October 8th, 1912. The new Principal, Rev. F. W. Sims, hopes to meet all pupils who expect to enter school the first day. Come and register and find your place in the class room even though you cannot remain. The new members of the faculty have had years of experience in the school room and are classed among the leaders in their profession. It is their purpose to maintain the high standard set for them by their predecessors. They are ready to do all they can for the mental, moral and spiritual uplift of every child or young person intrusted to their care. They scholars will be examined and assigned to their places the first day of school. Old students who were conditioned in any subject may be examined in that subject and if he passes will be allowed to go on with his class. The defendants, the heirs of subject and if he passes will be allowed to go on with his class.

F. W. SIMS, Principal.

Young Women

Read what Cardui did for Miss Myria Engler, of Paribault, Minn. She says: "Let me tell you how much good Cardul has done me. As a young girl, I always had to suffer so much with all kind of pain. Sometimes, I was so weak that I could hardly stand on my feet. I got a bottle of Cardul, at the drug store, and as soon as I had taken a few doses, I began to feel better.

Today, I feel as well as anyone can."

Are you a woman? Then you are subject to a large mber of troubles and irregularities, peculiar to women, which, in time, often lead to more serious trouble. A tonie is needed to kelp you over the hard places, to relieve weakness, headache, and other unnecessary pains, the signs of weak nerves and over-work.

For a tonic, take Cardul, the woman's tonic.

You will sever regret it, for it will certainly help you.

Ask your drugglet about it. He knows. He sells it.
