COUNTY BUSINESS.

The Asheboro Courier in discussing the need of better business management in most counties refers to Randolph's county home that cares for 17 inmates at a cost of $1400 per year as compared with the county home of Guilford that makes enough on its farm, which is not so good soil as the Randolph farm, to pay all the expenses of keeping the poor and enough corn over and above to largely feed the mules of the convict camp. A county home in North Carolina that makes its own way is a rare institution, but it is possible and the time will, in all probability within a few years, come when the exception will be just the reverse—that they will all or nearly all be self-sustaining.

Montgomery county has one of the best and most complete county homes in the state and with it a tract of good land that if once opened, improved and well managed will produce enough to make our home self-supporting like Guilford's. At present the cost per year is right about $1200.

The initial cost of opening up the farm, stocking it, procuring tools, etc., would be heavy to begin with but sooner or later it will be done. It will be so in nearly all counties.

Some Senators.

There is a crowd of young senators in Washington who want to get on the top rail before they know their "ab's" and are trying to attract public attention by opposing Senator Martin of Virginia and Senator Simmons of North Carolina for the chairmanships of the committees for which they stand in line for promotion and which they can fill much better and with wiser counsel than can those young fellows who haven't yet learned to distinguish between their longing for political preferment and their fitness for the positions they seek.

Senators like all the rest of us have their faults and sometimes think they know it all when they haven't learned the half of it—particularly those fresh ones.

THE HORSE OF FASHION.

In some of our cities the rich and aristocratic are restoring the elegant carriages and Victorias drawn by a pair of fancy steeds richly adorned with silvery harness, as their means of pleasure driving. They say the automobile is too common, too swift and dangerous in the congested city streets and parks for genuine recreation, relaxation and pleasure.

The auto has come to stay for both business and pleasure but a span of beautiful horses, well groomed, drawing a tasteful and commodious carriage possesses a distinction and charms the eye as no automobile can.

The horse is again occupying the sphere of fashionable distinction.

Miss Beatrice Wade Entertains.

The following from the Asheboro Courier of last week is a worthy one of Montgomery's daughters. Miss Beatrice Wade comes from one of the first families of this section of North Carolina and we feel a sense of pride in having contributed so much to the country at large. We hope to have the pleasure of hearing her in Troy before she returns to her adopted state—Texas. The article follows:

Miss Beatrice Wade is to head the graded school auditorium Friday night, the 27th, and give an entertainment. Miss Wade comes to Asheboro highly recommended. Her readings are of a high class and have taken well everywhere she has been. The moving picture show will close for that night. Miss Ina Auman and Mr. Grady Miller will also be on the program to the delight of their many friends in Asheboro.

Miss Beatrice Wade, of Sa Marcus, Texas, is a graduate of one of the foremost colleges of expression in the United States. She has taught expression for two years in St. Paul, Texas. She has traveled widely in the Western States and Mexico, where she has an enjoyable following of admirers. Miss Wade is spending the present winter in North Carolina, her native state, and meanwhile is taking occasion to give her home people the benefit of her rare talent.

MADE UP OF MIXED RACES

Similarity Between French and American Nations is Accounted For in That Way.

A notable French visitor speaks with surprise of the many points of similarity between the French people and the Americans.

He is merely making the obverse of a discovery which has puzzled many thousands of American travelers. The French and American peoples, with all their manifest differences, are oddly like each other in many ways.

Perhaps the explanation lies in the fact that both peoples are compounded of many and distinct races, fused together in a single nationality.

The mixture of races which has gone on in America is known to all. But an American is prone to forget that a smaller mixture has been in progress for a much longer time in France.

Three great races, Teutonic, Celtic and Latin, are represented today in the population of France.

Twenty nationalities have fused to make the French nationality. A dozen tribes of Gauls, the Romans, Franks, Burgundians, Normans, and others literally too numerous to mention, have been mixed and melted together to form France.

Similar mixtures produce similar results. That would appear to be the formula for the resemblances between France and America.

USE FOR SHOPPING GLOVES

Mr. Compton's Simpler Method at Bargain Counter Rejected With the Scorn It Deserved.

From his easy chair Mr. Compton watched his wife putting on a pair of tan gloves. "Aren't they too large for you?" he asked lazily.

"Oh, no, not for shopping gloves," said Mrs. Compton, and with her fingers off the table, she ran a scale up and down several times. "I have to be able to do that, you see," she explained.

"Do finger exercises? What for?" asked Mr. Compton.

"Those aren't finger exercises," Mrs. Compton's color deepened as, taking off the gloves, she began to smooth and stretch the fingers. "Those are—why, they're calculations, Henry. Don't you see, if I start downtown with ten dollars, and go to the silk counter and find two lovely remnants, one for three dollars and one for four and a half, I want to reckon up at once, underneath the counter, how much they'll come to, and how much I'll have left. And last week I missed a great bargain because I had on some light gloves and I couldn't reckon. I hadn't expected to go to the sale."

"Ah," said Mr. Compton. "Why not ask the clerk to reckon it for you?" "Henry!" cried his wife. "At a bargain counter! The clerk! Why, nobody but a man would ever think of such a thing for a minute!"—Youth's Companion.

Thoughtful John Chinaman. "The virtues of a Chinese laundryman never have been half told," said the woman. "Not of my laundryman, anyhow. He is such a motherly old soul. The other day he brought my handkerchiefs home folded in two different ways, some squared, some cat-cornered."

"Why the different styles in ironing?" I asked.

"John pointed to the stack of cat-cornered handkerchiefs. 'These baby,' he said. 'Then in the square style, 'These good. In big hotels, they give silk and go out with baby handkerchiefs.' "Kind old John. His idea was all right, but doesn't keep me from getting the mixed, for I can never remember which shape means baby and which means whole, so I am likely to be some myself with a baby handkerchief after all."

If candy makers had to depend on men consumers instead of upon Cupid and the kids, there would be great failures in saccharine circles—but there is one time of the year that my masculine sweet-tooth asserts itself and, instead of yearning for the chocolate-cream confections or the fruit dips, it clamors for a big bag of mixed candy, right out of the barrel.

I admit it is a plebeian taste, that the candy is mostly glue and flour, jammed to suit the taste of the adolescent—but, somehow, I cannot feel that I have rightly celebrated Christmas without this bag of candy.

When I was a boy this is the sort of candy we got and the name was early acquired. And what a lot of anticipation there was in eating the string-anticipation because when you stuck your hand in the sack for a sweet bit, you never knew whether it would come out clanking a hamdrop, wrapped or a peppermint.

And, too, the candy was cheap. You could get a big bag full of it for ten cents—and some of it was red and some white and some yellow and there were sugar hearts with molasses on them and nice round marbles with nuts in them and funny animal shapes that tickled—and oh! heaps of interesting things in that Christmas sack of candy.

This was the same kind of candy we got now up in red macaroni-bar sacks at the Sunday school Christmas tree festivities, along with the nuts and the popcorn balls.

And now, man that I am, I cannot get across the Rubicon of Christmas without anteing down to the candy store and asking for a sack of candy out of that barrel. Irresistibly the candy man will tell me he has much better candy and look at me in a surprised sort of way, but I know what I want when I want it—and Christmas is the time.

How about you? Haven't you a sweet tooth for the old-fashioned candy?

Write Ideas For Moving Picture Plays!

YOU CAN WRITE PHOTOPLAYS AND WE WILL SHOW YOU HOW

If you have ideas—if you can think—we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary excellence necessary. No "flowery language" is wanted. The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100.00 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

We have received many letters from the film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESANAY, LUBIN, SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a-line for publication."

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25.00, a low figure,

You will earn $100 monthly for spare time work.
