Representative Springer proposes to introduce a bill for the purpose the tanks were cleaned before this of preventing the crowding of the House docket with private measures.

He says that of the 15,002 bills introduced in the last Congress four-fiths were of a private nature Almost the same measures are brought forward at every Congress and the country is put to an expense of hundreds of thousands of dallors in printing and reprinting them. Mr. Springer's proposition is to have these matters inserted in the form of petitions, which will then be referred to the oppropoiate committees, and if reported upon favorably, printed. This plan would relieve the document clerks a good deal of work, but would necessitate the employment of one or more extra petition clerks.
