PRESIDENT HARRISON'S MESSAGE charge the duties of his office with which was sent to Congress Tuesa sense of what is due to both day is a very long document, and parties. The trouble about this covers a wide scope of subjects as is that, judging from Mr. Reed's well as a big space in the newspast utterances, if he gives the papers. Published in full, it would Democrats what he considers fill about ten columns of THE their dues they will deserve the HERALD. A great deal of his space prayers and sympathies of their is devoted to a review of our relafriends. It is to be hoped that with tion with foreign countries, which that good old Christian Democrat, in the main, are pleasant, he says. Dr. Milburn, to pray for him every He makes the statement that at morning for the next two years, home a general condition of prosand show him the error of his perity prevails, evidently forgetways, he may grow up to be a ting that our western farmers are very good sort of fellow. paying ten per cent. interest on their mortgages and selling their corn at 13 cents a bushel. He may, sion in St. Louis that bodes no however, look at the matter from good to trusts and monopolies the standpoint of the fellows who and their agents in Congress and hold the mortgages. He is opposed to lending Government funds to the banks without interest, which is right; he wants to reduce the tariff without interfering with any protected interest, which means very little of anything. He wants the tobacco tax removed, which is correct and proper; he recommends the abolition of the tax on spirits used in the arts and in manufacture alone, which is not what his orators promised the mountain people of North Carolina by a great deal. He advises the liberal expenditure of money in coast defenses, and in the improvements of our river and harbors, has a great deal to say on tion in their homes. It is under the silver question, and expressed consumption caused by the lack himself as afraid of the free coinage of silver. He alludes to the Field-Terry case, and recommends the passage of a law giving the Federal Court jurisdiction to try such offences as assaulting or killing judges, or intimidating witnesses in criminal cases. He expresses himself as in favor of national aid to education, but he says : "The suggestion of a national grant in aid of education grows chiefly out of the condition and needs of the emancipated slaves and his descendants. The relief should as far as possible, while necessarily proceeding on some general lines, be applied to the need that suggested it." So it would seem that his prime object in recommending this aid is that the negro may receive the benefits of the measure, and that these funds should as far as possible be applied to the education of the negro. His white Southern constituents who have been howling for the Blair bill will scarcely relish this part of the programme mapped out by the benevolent head, of the Government. He devotes some space to the political and civil rights of the negro, which he says must be protected, and while not in favor of the government taking all the process of elections for Representatives in Congress into its control, he recommends that the present laws be strengthened and extended so as to "give the black man a free ballot." Upon the whole, the message is a more temperate document than we expected, and it is not wanting in ability, having evidently been prepared with the utmost care and caution in every detail. CLEVELAND is the Democratic watchword. Wherever and whenever you get a lot of Democrats together they are bound to say something about him. The Democratic members of the Fifty-first Congress in caucus assembled last Monday adopted the following ringing resolutions : We, the Democratic members of the House of the entire Internal Revenue system Representatives of the Fifty-first swept out of existence as soon as Congress, at the beginning of the the present Congress met, Mr. first session, hereby send greeting Harrison's suggestion that upon to the people of the country and the assurance of our continued might be well to remove the tax confidence in and devotion to the from spirits used in the arts and in principles of tariff reform as emmessage to the last Congress upon that subject, and in the platform of principles adopted by the last Democratic National Convention at St. Louis; and that we hail with delight the emphatic approval of those principles by the peo- Washington last Monday, but cast ple as expressed at the polls in the his vote for Cummings, of New

The Halfields and McCoys are still a terror in Eastern Kentucky. Judge Lilly and Commonwealth's attorney Marrs have both been refused to hold courts in certain counties where they fear being shot from ambush. Judge Lilly is now holding court in Whitesburg, and had to go 150 miles out of his way to reach the court rather than pass through some of the counties in which the Halfields reign supreme.

A Hendersonville despatch to the Asheville Citizen says that on last Saturday evening A. E. Posey, a prominent young lawyer of Hendersonville, killed a man named Furman Forest in that town. The 'difficulty grew out of a trial in which Mr. Posey appeared against Forest, and after the trial was over the altercation was renewed, and in the fight which ensued Posey shot Forest twice in the breast killing him instantly. Posey is in jail. Rev. Thomas Dixon, the young
