It literally loads the newspapers down with notices of itself and its work, with ananouncements of every entertainment, every meeting, repeated so often that they afflict the readerhundreds of columns of it in a year, worth thousands of dollars at advertising rates. Of course nothing is paid for it-'twere sacrilege to ask money of people trying to be good !-but as an evidence that the papers are liked for what they have done they are asked to furnish free copies to the association. thus enabling 50 or 100 persons, some of whom might otherwise subscribe, to escape that neces sity."

This puts the case well, and is about the size of it in North Carolina, too, where the papers are fearfully victimized by this too general disposition to "ride a free borse to death." It is a habit that has grown with the years, until every newspaper publisher, especially the publishers of daily papers, have just cause of complaint and protest. Few of those who practice it seem to realize how unreasonable it is, what an imposition it is on the publisher, or that every line he prints costs him money and that the expenses of the paper must be met by the income of the paper, which is deeply cut into by the deadhead matter thrust upon it. Not only that but the insertion of this kind of matter (which should go in strictly as advertising to be paid for as other the Ladies' Home Journal, making advertising) reduces the space for color. Down the winding road extended notes and additions to other matter in which the public and the readers of the paper are more interested.

> Papers in cities north of us, and also some of the Southern cities where newspapers are conducted on strictly business principles, as other euterprises are, do not suffer from this abuse, for there when people hand in matter in the nait and it doesn't go into the paper and which is interesting as an exway it should be everywhere, and The law is as follows: that is the view that should be carrying on a destructive warfare for a quarter of a century. But peace did not long prevail. Complications arose which kept the young State of Franklin in a constant turmoil. Congress still asserted jurisdiction. A reaction, stimulated by disappointed officeseekers, ensued among those who had been most clamorous for the new State. Jealousy of Sevier's success animated his rivals, who hesceforth sought to make his life a burden. The population was divided into the Franklin and the North Carolina factions. Elections were held and appointments made under the laws of both States. Two sets of officers claimed authority, each nullifying the acts of the other. One faction would steal the public records from the other, only to be treated in like manner in turn. The courts were in a chaotic condition. Wills could not be proved, titles perfected, or justice administered. No taxes were paid. Marriages performed by officials of one faction were not recognized by the other.

Still the determined young State fought for its life. It exercised even Federal power and authorized the coinage of specie, though its chief medium of exchange continued to be the skins of wild animals. Finally, emissaries were sent to the North Carolina Legislature to make overtures of peace. The address of Franklin's representative was a model of eloquence, fervid with the rhetoric of the Rev. olutionary era. But it fell upon unheeding ears. No recognition would be made of the rebelious State, though North Carolina had once cut her off without her consent.

The last session of the Franklin Legislature met in September, 1787. That there was then no inested, they are expected to pay for lature, which has been preserved unless it is paid for. That's the ample of primitive financiering.
