One of Jake's Yarns.

Jacob Seagle of our town is one of the bright men of the North Carolina colony in Washington.

He gave us this week among other good things, a fine description of "the line up" at the old Metropolitan, which after the Cleveland victory was wout to wait on Ransom getting through breakfast.

The old man soon learned to know the "regulars" and would look down the line for new faces hoping they might not belong to office seekers.

Jake said that on a certain morning the last man in the line was a well known presiding elder, whom the Senator greeted with unusual warmth.

The son of the church at once hastened to say that he had picked out a certain Treasury berth, which only awaited the Ransom O. K. to be his.

GENERAL JULIAN S. CARR FOR SENATOR.

The people around Moore are anxious for an opportunity to show their appreciation of Gen. J. S. Carr by voting for him for the United States Senate.

About two hundred Democrats met at the court house in Durham last week and organized a Bryan-Sevenson-Jule Carr Club, and elected the following permanent officers: President, Judge R. W. Winston; Vice Presidents, W. A. Slaters and O. F. Adams; Secretary, W. J. Christians; Treasurer, J. K. Patton.

His schoolmates and comrades in arms call him Jule Carr. He has been a benefactor to his people from the beginning of his business career.

Everybody loves him. The poor, struggling boys know him; the girls have been looked after and educated by him. The poor women and children of Orange county remember the car loads of corn dispensed free by him.

Julian S. Carr has been fighting in the front rank of the Democratic party ever since the war, and has held out of his personal funds for the success of the Democratic party, more money than all the other candidates combined.

He has responded to every call for help regardless of their creed. He is the man that the good people of North Carolina want to represent them in the United States Senate.

The people of North Carolina will never fully compensate him for his services. It becomes the duty of the Democratic party to honor by electing him to the United States Senate, for which service the people of North Carolina will ever be proud.

COTTON GOODS ADVANCING.

BUT OUR PRICES will remain the same. We picked up our stock just when the market had reached the lowest point. Cotton is over ten cents in the field, but to price our Outing, Domestic and Cotton Flannels, you'd think it was going at old prices.
