Britain To Be Weed Buyer

United Kingdom Will Be Our Top Market in Early Part of Postwar Era

Raleigh, April.—The United Kingdom will be the most important market for United States-grown flue-cured tobacco in the early stages of the post-war picture, says the United States Department of Agriculture—but, from a long-term viewpoint the picture may change.

The proportion of total imports of Empire-produced flue-cured tobacco retained for home consumption in the United Kingdom increased over a period of years, and that trend may continue unless preferential duty is removed or substituted.

agreed upon explanation for the current shortage is yet to come, tobaccoists in this greatest of all flue-cured states assert.

However, individual farm acreage allotments for the 1945 crop will be the same as those last year, which totaled 1,095,000 acres. In addition, an amount equal to two per cent of the total acreage allotted to all farms in 1940 will be made available for increasing individual farm acreages found to be inequitable. Also, five per cent of the national flue-cured quota will be made available in 1945 for establishing allotments for farms on which no flue-cured tobacco has been grown in the past five years.

On 1944 quotas alone, about 1,080,000 pounds of flue-cured tobacco were produced. Current predictions are that exports generally may tend to decline after the next few years, although exports during the next two or three years may be as large as available supplies will permit. In addition to the Empire, China and Japan were important markets for United States flue-cured tobacco before the war, but exports to China and Japan were cut off completely during the war. Inasmuch as production of

Forty per cent of the flue-cured tobacco produced in this country normally is exported. But whether increased production, predicted for 1945, will help relieve a general cigarette shortage remains to be seen. A plausible uniformity age distribution as all other states. This calculation of adjusted rates involves expert statistical knowledge and, therefore, rarely gets into popular reports of vital statistics.

In 1940, for instance, only 4 states had lower crude rates than North Carolina, whereas, 37 states had lower adjusted death rates. That is, North Carolina ranks 38th. This simply means that we still have little to crow about when it comes to mortality. Actually, instead of having the lowest true death rate "east of the Mississippi," we are surpassed by 15 eastern states. (This adjusted rate is based on the deaths by age from 1 to 75 years and is adjusted to the age distribution of the United States population in 1940.)

Dunbarton Plan One Step Toward World Peace

WASHINGTON, March.—John Foster Dulles described the Dunbarton Oaks Security Plan last night as no more than a first step toward organized world peace.

The development of actually working machinery, the international lawyer and Republican adviser on world affairs said, is a matter for the years and the evolution of international law.

He backed the Dunbarton proposals, however, as having value for the purpose of bringing the nations together in the fellowship from which that law could develop.

eral Council of Churches Commission on a Just and Durable Peace and consultant to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York during last year's presidential campaign, said in a speech prepared for a United Nations rally here:

"In the meantime, conflicts of interests will still be settled primarily by power. We can hope that the power will be potential power and not actually applied power. That depends above all on the wisdom, self-restraint, and the unity of the peoples and leaders of Great Britain, Soviet Russia and the United States."

International law, he said, does not now cover the serious disputes which have led to major wars, and there does not now exist enough association among the nations, nor sufficient trust and confidence, to set up any formal machinery for creating such law.

Miss Emmie Nelson, representative of the National 4-H Club Committee, will come to Raleigh on April 16 to discuss 4-H club awards with L. R. Harrill, State Club Leader.

Easter Prayer

MULTITUDINOUS are the words of prayer which will reach heavenward this Easter. Each of us will say a prayer apart—for the safety of a loved one in battle—for the return of a son, or brother, or husband now in an enemy's prison camp—for the healing of a wounded dear one. Yet together, we shall find our greatest faith—particularly those of us whom the war has already bereft—in recalling His resurrection, for whom this day is reborn each year!
