WACS Helping To Care For Wounded Men

The little things mean a lot to a wounded or sick soldier in an Army hospital. In order to give our men the attention that they deserve, overworked Army doctors and nurses need help. Working under the direct supervision of doctors and nurses, members of the Women's Army Corps, according to WAC recruiter, Sgt. Charles Patterson, are helping care for our fighting men.

"These Wacs serve with hospital companies in general Army hospitals in this country," said Sgt. Patterson. As medical technicians they do much to relieve the Army nurse for more professional care. They can take temperatures; make beds; give baths; keep records of the patients progress; and do many of the small but important details that will help speed the recovery of a sick or injured man.

The surgical technicians with a WAC hospital company prepare operating rooms and surgical equipment and do varied nonprofessional duties for post-operative and pre-operative cases.

"Members of the Women's Army Corps who are assigned to hospital companies have the satisfaction of knowing that they are working for the most appreciative men in the world...wounded or sick G. I.s," added Sgt. Patterson. "The way a soldier says, 'Thanks,' means a great deal to these women who are helping them when they really need help.

"Opportunities for service with WAC hospital companies are now open to over 8,000 women. To qualify, you do not have to be professionally trained. The Army will train you." If you are between the ages of twenty and forty-nine, inclusive, with no dependent children under fourteen years of age, and have two years of high school education (or its equivalent), contact Sgt. Patterson at the Post Office.

Training School To Have Program

Person County Training School for Negroes, will have an Open House for all parents on Saturday, April 14, at 10:00 A. M., when students will show parents types of work that have been done this year. A short program will be rendered after which refreshments will be served. All parents are cordially invited.

Complete information on the program is available from high school principals, college deans, and the Army recruiter at the Post Office Building.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion, thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes. Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

Certain Tire Certificates Now Invalid Type

The Person War Price and Rationing Board today has advised holders of tire certificates dated prior to December 1, 1944, that these certificates became invalid on April first.

The action was taken to insure that the sharply cut supply of tires for April be used in transportation needs most essential to the war effort.

to attend, according to T. C. Tillman, principal.

fort. The pressure of an excess supply of outstanding certificates in proportion to the continuing short supply of tires made this invalidation necessary he said.

The Person Board points out that the action applies to all types of tires, including those for passenger cars, trucks and farm implements.

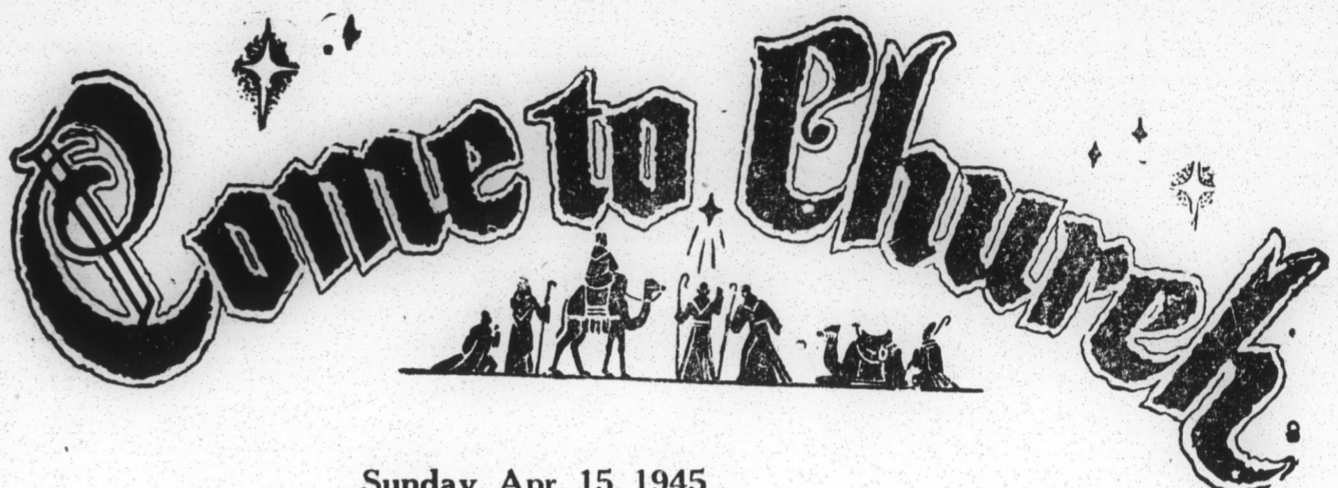

The Board calls attention to a recent statement that less than 65 per cent of the number of passenger tires produced in March had been allocated for April by the War Production Board.

OUR MODERN IGNORANCE OF RELIGION

By the Rev. J. R. Jolly, Pastor of Ca-Vel and Longhurst Methodist Churches

Text: Scripture: 1 Timothy 3
It is becoming increasingly apparent that modern men and women know very little about religion as a vital factor in their lives. It is no longer something that shapes our lives and destinies but has become a form which we fit into our lives. At best, religion is an institutional influence in our lives which makes itself felt once a week.

Even this enclaved sort of religion that we hold does not give us a great deal of concern. Few of us stop to consider what it is that we believe or why we believe certain things. These observations make it possible to make the generalization that modern man is sorely ignorant of religion.

He is ignorant in three ways. First, man does not know what he believes. Try putting your own faith into words. Imagine expressing your religious beliefs in terms that would be acceptable and understandable to a person who had never heard of our churches and of our way of life. Many persons take part in glibly saying the Apostle's Creed or some affirmation of Faith but never realize the things that they are saying. Our beliefs about God, about Jesus, about religion in general are more superstition than fact, more fancy than faith.

In the second place, we are ignorant of the Bible. Few persons today know the Scriptures even in a literary sense. This is evidenced by the haphazard and silly way in which isolated passages of scripture are quoted to prove a point. Many persons do not even know what is in the Bible, let alone who wrote its sections, why they were written and under what conditions they came to be written. We shall have difficulty escaping Bibliolatry unless we have an intelligent grasp of the history, the growth, the production of Biblical literature.

Man's ignorance of religion is seen in the third instance in his ignorance of the Church. There is a lack of interest in missions; in the story of the church lands today that spells doom for an organization that must be world-wide or be untrue to its very nature. Very few persons today know anything about the history of the Church of Jesus Christ. Indeed, few of us know anything about our own denomination and how it came to be founded.

This ignorance of religious matters has led to some very disastrous things in our time. It has caused us to emphasize money and numbers in our churches more than character and quality. Think how Jesus would have dealt with those who place a collection of primary importance in the Kingdom of God. Think how he would drive us from these pagan temples that bear his name when we pray and plead for large congregations and large numbers to be added to the church rolls. Again, this ignorance has led us to emphasize the institutional church rather than the individual. This is grossly unchristian. Jesus always treated men as individuals. He was interested in the human element in religion. How far we have gone from that when we stress our building programs, we refer to the Church as being a building rather than a community of human beings. In our materialistic world it is hard for us to realize that the Kingdom of God is not made with brick but with the fibre of human personality.

In view of our ignorance of religion it is useless for us to plead that the Sabbath be kept holy, that the churches be filled, that the church be supported. The need of these things indicates how very sick our religion has become. It is necessary for us to begin again with the individuals. When individual persons are interested in becoming informed about what their religion means, about the Scriptures and what they mean, and about the Church and its history and program, our religion will live again.
